135-Million Start Asked For College Student Aid

Higher Education Commission Says Segregation Laws Should Be Erased

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Federal aid of 135 million dollars to aid needy college students in 1948-49 was proposed yesterday by the President's Commission of Higher Education.

The expenditure is urged as a "starting point" for Federal aid in the commission's sweeping program to equalize educational opportunity across the Nation for deserving students.

Stating that it was following the precedent of the GI Bill of Rights, the commission called for 120 million dollars in scholarships or grants-in-aid to give some 300,000 deserving students an average of $400 a year.

Another 15 million dollars would be spent in the first year of the program as fellowships, for graduate study, giving 10,000 students $1500 a year.

Both forms of aid would be increased in subsequent years.

Would Repeal Segregation

Other highlights of the second of the commission's reports, which have not been previously disclosed:

1. All legislation requiring segregation of schools should be repealed, but meanwhile, facilities must be made equal for Negro and white students.

2. Colleges should become laboratories of interrace and interfaith fellowship, and should immediately discontinue discriminatory practices of their own, especially those involving admissions.

3. Some provision, presumably with Federal support, should be made to aid needy students in their last two years of high school.

4. Tuition and other fees in the 13th and 14th years of publicly-controlled colleges should be eliminated, and other fees should be reduced at least to 1938-39 levels.

In its current report, "Equalizing and Expanding Individual Opportunity," the 28-man commission amplified some of the proposals made in its first report issued December 12.

Among these was the proposal for establishment of hundreds of two-year community colleges across the country. In its earlier report the commission also called for free education through the thirteenth and fourteenth grades, doubling of college enrollment by 1950, and struck out sharply at racial and religious discrimination.

Disparity Called Striking

Expanding its attack on segregation in its second report, the commission, which is headed by Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, declared:

"The disparity is striking between expenditures for current education purposes by Negro and by other institutions of higher education in the District of Columbia and the 17 Southern States which require the segregation of Negroes.

"This is shown in an unpublished report by Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University. For all types of institutions, whether publicly or privately controlled, the ratio of expenditures of institutions for whites to those of institutions for Negroes ranged from 3 to 1 in the District of Columbia to 42 to 1 in Kentucky.

"And nowhere in the area, except in the District of Columbia, did there appear a single institution that approximated the undergraduate, graduate, and professional offerings characteristic of a first-class State university."

Although Negroes represent approximately 10 per cent of the total population of this country, their enrollment in colleges or universities in 1947 accounted for only 3.1 per cent of the total, said the commission.

Howard University, said the commission, has overtaxed its facilities to admit 75 students to its freshman class, while it received 1350 applications in 1946-47.

The university's dental school, said the report, is limited to a

He Is Held for Coroner

Wife, 24, Killed in Argument Over Lipstick on Husband

An argument over a lipstick imprint on her husband's cheek ended in death early yesterday for Mrs. Virginia A. Austin, attractive 24-year-old State Department clerk.

Police are holding her husband, George A. Austin, 25, for action of the coroner. The inquest is scheduled for this morning.

According to the story which Austin told police, he had returned to the apartment on the third floor of 1340 7th st. nw., sometime late Saturday after visiting his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Grattan, at 29 Rhode Island ave. nw. Police said Austin had told them his sister and Robert E. Lee, a roomer, had driven home with him in a cab and that his sister had kissed him as he alighted, leaving a lipstick mark on his cheek.

Austin had a .45-caliber with him when he returned home, but he "didn't remember" how it got into his wife's hand in the argument which followed, police said. He is reported to have told them the gun went off while he and his wife were scuffling over it. He insisted he doesn't know who had the gun at the time.

Police stated Mrs. Austin was shot once through the cheek. The bullet came out of the back of her head on a slightly downward course and lodged in a window frame.

They also found another bullet hole in the framework of an artificial fireplace about 5 feet from the chair in which Mrs. Austin's body was found.

Police said Austin had admitted that his wife was standing when she was shot, and that he had subsequently placed her in the chair.

GEORGE A. AUSTIN

Police said that the palm of her right hand was smeared with blood from her wound.

When police entered the apartment at about 2:40 a. m. yesterday, they said Mrs. Austin was holding the gun in the blood-smeared hand. Police puzzled over the question of whether the gun was placed there before or after the death shot was fired.

First intimation of the slaying was received at Police headquarters at about 2:30 a. m. when Lieut. Herbert Wanamaker received a call

Danger Halts Body Search In Hotel Ruins

Sunday Crew Taken Off Night Shift; Hunt To Be Resumed Today

Thirty wreckers, working a special Sunday shift to find bodies of three persons believed buried in the partly collapsed Empire Hotel, were suddenly ordered off the job last night because of the danger in night work.

"We have been working on our nerve since 1:30 p. m.," Murray T. Shipp, president of the Pine Construction Co., said. "It is just too dangerous."

Shipp was on the third floor of the apartment hotel at the southwest corner of 9th and New York ave. nw. when he shouted to workmen at 8:22 p. m., "Grab your tools and knock off."

Confers With Inspector

He then conferred with Building Inspector Robert H. Davis, and James Gongwer, one of two civil engineers employed by Nick Papanicolas, Empire building owner, as consultants with the construction company.

A few minutes later, Shipp announced that the search for the bodies would be suspended temporarily, and that only a skeleton crew of six men would work through the night removing debris from the street level.

Officials do not believe any bodies will be found on the first or second floors as those reported missing lived on higher floors.

More Strengthening Today

Inspector Davis said the full force would resume work about 7:30 a. m. today and work throughout the morning at least in strengthening the building before starting the search for bodies again.

Shipp and Inspector Davis said one reason that the search was suspended was that "it was too dangerous to tear into third and fourth floor debris at night."

Shipp added, "It just got on my nerves."

Three persons are still believed to be buried under the rubble. They are:

Ernest Dorsey, 44, who lived in apartment 21; Mrs. K. B. Van Sickler, 78, who lived in apartment 32; Joseph Smith, about 65, who lived in apartment 52 and whose wife was critically injured.

Cause Still a Mystery

The wreckers spent Saturday afternoon and up until 1:30 p. m. yesterday strengthening what was left of main supports in the seven-story building which crumbled late Tuesday night, killing one and injuring 12 tenants. Cause of the collapse is still a mystery.

Shipp described working conditions as "exceedingly dangerous." Men working on what was the third floor could look up and see debris which passed for a ceiling, hanging by what one worker called "the grace of God."

Inspector Davis, on the scene yesterday, pointed out that a 24-inch steel beam had been swung over the top of the roof to support the top floors.

As explained by Shipp, the second and third floor levels were resting entirely on the rubble choking the street floor level.

Seeks Men for Third Shift

Late yesterday Shipp was still trying to find enough men to form a third shift for around-the-clock digging. Fire Rescue Squad No. One's ambulance and squad wagon had orders to stand-by on a 24-hour basis.

At 1:30 p. m. workers had completed installation of supporting

Illicit Affairs Increase Zonal Army Divorces

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 21 (U.P.)—Occupation mistresses are making Army wives into grass widows at a scandalously increasing rate, an Army chaplain said today.

Only an estimated 50 per cent of the mistresses are frauleins. The rest are Allied civilian employes who have become camp followers, according to Army spokesmen.

Seventy per cent of the divorces sought by wives of soldiers in Germany can be traced to illicit romances, discovered by the wives when they arrive, records revealed.

"There aren't any moral controls here," said the chaplain, who interviews couples contemplating divorce. "These men get a taste of it. Their wives get here from the States, and the men just can't stop."

Because no divorces are granted to Americans in Germany, they must return to the United States for them. Authorities said 157 applications for transport home for the expressed purpose of dissolving marriages have been filed in the last three months.

"But there must have been many more who didn't apply," an officer said. "The wives just slipped home quietly and didn't tell anyone.

"I believe a majority of the wives who file to go back are doing so to get a divorce, but of course we can't know for certain."

One wife arrived from the United States to find her husband living in a Frankfurt suburb with two mistresses, an officer said. The wife left for the States as soon as possible.

...ods Pauley On Deal Data

Calls for Records On His Trading in Commodities as Soon as Possible

By the United Press

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) called on Edwin W. Pauley last night to deliver the records covering his trading on commodity exchanges to the Senate Appropriations Committee "as soon as possible."

The Agriculture Department, it was disclosed in the meantime, probably will publish sometime this week an "advance list" of 500 to 600 traders who had big holdings in the commodity markets on some "sample" day or days of the last two years.

In a brief, pointed note, the Michigan Senator reminded Pauley that he had agreed to hand over the data in question in the course of testimony before the Appropriations Committee on December 10. Ferguson is chairman of a special subcommittee inquiring into speculation on the commodity exchanges.

It especially wants to know whether "Government insiders" profited from confidential information on Government buying of commodities.

Pauley, a special assistant to Secretary of the Army Royall, testified that he held something "less than a million" dollars worth of wheat, corn, lard and other futures contracts when he took the job last fall. But he also said he had disposed of all but 50,000 bushels of wheat futures since that time and had not used information that came to him in his official capacity.

The uproar over commodity speculation was touched off by the charges of Harold E. Stassen that Pauley and "other administration insiders" were cleaning up in the exchanges.

J. M. Mehl, chief of the Agriculture Department's Commodity Exchange Authority, told the United Press it was "extremely unlikely" that his small staff would be able to complete work this week on the full list of 12,000 to 15,000 traders, large and small, whose market operations have been recorded by the Government during 1943 and 1947.

But he said the agency "probably" will get out a first installment of "500 to 600 names," showing who held large amounts of commodity futures on a given market day, or days.

Such a list can be compiled fairly quickly, he explained, because every trader who holds 200,000 bushels of grain in any one future on any one exchange is required to report daily to the government.

Named in September

Pauley, wealthy California oilman, was named special assistant to Royall last September.

Ferguson's prodding letter was made public by the Senator's office here. Both he and Pauley left Washington last week for Christmas vacations. Pauley is expected back around January 1, while Ferguson plans to visit the Bahamas for two weeks.

Ferguson indicated that the committee plans to call Pauley back for another personal appearance on its witness stand after it has studied his books.

D. C. Printers Ask ITU for Strike Vote

4 Washington Papers And 600 Workers Involved in Dispute

Members of the Columbia Typographical Union No. 101 yesterday requested permission from their international union to take a strike vote against the four Washington daily newspapers.

Meeting at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., the printers requested authorization by a vote of 412 to 42. There are about 600 printers employed by Washington newspapers. Several hundred other union members, employed at commercial firms and the Government Printing Office, were present at the meeting but did not participate in the balloting.

The local's action leaves the next move in the dispute here to the executive board of the parent International Typographical Union (AFL). It is understood that the international union, which is headed by Woodruff Randolph, can either make further efforts at negotiation, or authorize the strike vote.

A strike by the local union would require a three-fourths vote. If that vote fails, the union can appeal to the international executive council, and the council, if further negotiations fail, may call a strike.

The printers' contract with the Washington Publishers Association expired on November 11. Negotiations have continued since that time and the printers have

More Than 200 Kiddies Get Presents At Central Mission

More than 200 kiddies squealed with delight as Mrs. Harry S. Truman distributed gifts yesterday at the Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw.

The Christmas party excitement was too much for at least one youngster, 5-year-old Jean Copeland of 3615½ Prospect ave. nw. After the photographers stopped "shooting" pictures of Mrs. Truman handing gifts to Jean and also to Carl Eager, jr., 513 M st. sw., Jean fled from the Mission Chapel, reporters and photographers racing after her to get her name and address.

Mrs. Truman, who came alone to the party, stood on a gift-jammed platform and wished the youngsters and their parents "a very merry Christmas."

Maj. William H. Ramsey, president of the Mission's board of directors, introduced the "First Lady."

"When I worked for the Justice Department I had a secretary from Missouri and she was fine, so I've come to assume that all people from Missouri are fine," he said.

Just before Mrs. Truman arrived at the Mission, Santa Claus galloped into the chapel while the children sang "Jingle Bells . . . jingle bells." The Rev. Herbert E. Eberhardt, Mission superintendent, accepted checks for the Mission's Christmas work from representatives of Sibley Hospital, the Government Girls' Club and Federal Bureau of Investigation employes.

Mrs. Eberhardt, superintendent of the Mission Children's Emergency Home, said the Christmas work actually began in October, when prospective donors were given Christmas bags to fill.

'Feller' Arrives Here to Become First Dog of U. S.

By The Associated Press

"Feller," a five-week-old silver buff cocker spaniel, arrived here yesterday to become the Nation's "first dog."

The puppy's flight to President Truman from Chicago was delayed by low visibility yesterday.

He will follow in the famous pawprints of Fala, President Franklin D. Roosevelt's pet and companion at wartime conferences.

Feller was given to President Truman by Mrs. Peter Joseph Marsden of Galena, Ill., formerly a nurse for the President's mother, the late Mrs. Martha E. Truman.

Western Union Strike Averted On Last Day

Walkout of 50,000 Was Scheduled To Start Tomorrow

BULLETIN

Nation-wide strike of 50,000 Western Union employes, set to begin at 6 a. m., tomorrow, was averted last night, according to an official announcement.

Prospects of averting a Nation-wide telegraph strike of 50,000 Western Union employes, set for 6 a. m. tomorrow, were seen here last night by sources close to negotiations.

Federal conciliators, however, were reported still laboring with union and company representatives at a late hour to head off the threatened strike.

The disputants had been summoned to all-day conferences at the Labor Department here, conferences that stretched on into the night.

Possible settlement of the strike threat, it was said, hinged on company acceptance of a proposal to submit the wage dispute to a fact-finding panel of three investigators.

Officially, however, E. L. Hageman, president of the eastern division of the powerful Commercial Telegraphers Union (AFL), told a rally of some 300 Washington employes at Hotel Annapolis shortly before 3:30 p. m.:

"There have been no developments at the Labor Department. It looks like the strike will definitely be on."

Earlier, J. W. Reynolds, general president of the Washington Local 24, which he said covers 700 employes in 27 branch offices, informed the workers "I'm not kidding when I say we're actually going to hit the streets."

He called for volunteers to launch the city-wide picketing and said placards would be available today at strike headquarters in the Bond Building, Room 321.

Local union leaders adopted a resolution promising "100 per cent" support of the pending strike and their "national and local officers."

Mass strategy rallies, similiar to the Washington meeting, were called throughout the country to map plans for the threatened work stoppage.

Cyrus S. Ching, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, called representatives of both sides into conferences after no progress was achieved at sessions which recessed shortly after midnight Saturday.

Aid Debate Continues on Air During Hill Recess

Robert La Follette, Douglas Mentioned As Administrators For Marshall Plan

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

With the Capitol dark until January 6, members of Congress have turned to other forums for lively debate on the subject of long-term aid to Europe.

This question, in the form of President Truman's recommendation that 17 billion dollars be appropriated for 16 nations over a four-year period, will confront them immediately on their return. Meanwhile they are not permitting it to languish for want of attention.

Foremost among items of speculation was the question of who might be chosen for the key jobs in Mr. Truman's blueprint for administering the Marshall Plan. These are an economic cooperation adviser at $20,000 a year and a roving ambassador at $20,000.

Two Mentioned Prominently

Prominent among those suggested for the two posts are a Democrat and a Progressive-Republican, Lewis W. Douglas, Ambassador to Great Britain, and former Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., of Wisconsin.

Observers here professed to see likelihood of support for both men in congressional circles, particularly with the Republican majority. Both are intimately connected with formulating the Marshall Plan, LaFollette in drafting the Harriman Report, and Douglas as a close associate of Secretary of State Marshall.

Meanwhile, debate on the Marshall Plan raged in all parts of the country, with disagreement not so much over its fundamental purpose as over means of putting it into effect.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) has objected to making any commitment beyond one year and has found considerable support among Republicans and Democrats alike. The tendency seems to be to favor a limited pledge coupled with a policy of wait and see what Europe will do toward fulfilling its part of the self-help program.

Called "Calculated Risk"

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), in a broadcast with his Republican colleague, Senator Baldwin, described the plan as a "calculated risk" designed to prevent "all Europe from coming under the dominance of Russia." Baldwin agreed and said the alternative might be to pay out 66 billion dollars a year for national defense.

Senator Thomas (D., Utah) told a radio audience congressional action would "do no good toward establishing stability in Europe until Europe itself is ready to act."

Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, also described the plan as a "calculated risk" in an interview with Ed Hart on WINX. He pointed out that success of the plan would mean the economic rehabilitation of Europe which, in turn, would result in revival of trade with Europe. This, he declared, would repay the cost of carrying the Marshall Plan to its conclusion.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) told a radio audience he believed congressional action on the stopgap aid program was a factor in stopping the wave of Communist-inspired riots and strikes in France and Italy.

Taft Repeats Objections

Taft repeated his objections to large-scale American spending and said the Administration had "overdrawn" the seriousness of western Europe's needs. He said people returning from Europe had not reported evidence of "complete collapse," but agreed some American aid would be helpful in avoiding likelihood of Communist domination of all Europe.

A plea for a Marshall Plan for China was sounded by Dr. H. H. Kung, former Chinese premier and finance minister, who said his country needed more than 1½ billion dollars to stabilize its economy and halt the advance of communism. Congress included 18 million for China in its stopgap aid bill and Marshall has recommended 300 million dollars for that country. Mr. Truman told Congress he would submit a proposal for help to China next year.

Hearings on the Marshall Plan for Europe were scheduled to open before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee January 7. Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has said they would be "exhaustive."

The Washington Post Poll

Voteless Washington Almost Unanimous On Santa, His Legend and Bag of Tricks

Washingtonians voted 10 to 1 for Santa Claus anyway, in a Post Poll made this week.

Best candidate for 1948 yet found, the jolly fat man is enthusiastically welcomed in 83 per cent of Washington homes. Only 8 per cent would stop up the fireplace to keep him from coming in. The remainder welcome him with qualifications.

What is his platform? Why, fun, say 61 per cent. Fun for the children and for the grownups, too. What would Christmas be like without him, many asked Post Pollers in surprise.

But aside from the merriment he brings, Santa Claus has a deeper significance to many Washingtonians. Fourteen per cent said he introduces the children to the world of fantasy and imagination without which life would be too matter-of fact and dreary. Another 14 per cent said that Santa Claus is a lovely tradition which is a part of growing-up for every American child. Eleven per cent indorsed Santa Claus because he teaches the spirit of unselfish giving.

In the District and nearby parts of Maryland and Virginia, Post Pollers asked parents and childless people alike:

Do you think it's a good idea to teach children to believe in Santa Claus?"

Here are their answers:

	All	Parents	Non-Parents
Yes, it's a good idea to teach them about Santa	83%	85%	81%
No, it's not a good idea	8	7	10
All right up to a certain age, or if taught in the right way	8	8	8
Undecided	1	..	1

Both parents and people without children are strong supporters of Santa, perhaps because they enjoy him so much themselves. Age has little to do with it. One 76-year-old woman said: "I think adults should believe in him, too. I still do."

Asked why they favor Santa Claus, people in this group mentioned a variety of reasons.

	Per cent of those who favor Santa Claus
It's so much fun	61%
It's fun for the children and parents enjoy it, too; it gives the children something to look forward to.
It encourages their imagination, and children are entitled to fantasy	17
Fairy stories, dreamland and myths are part of childhood; they are too young to be faced with realities of life; they will meet the hard world soon enough.
It is traditional, a part of American childhood	17
I was taught that, and I taught my child; every American kid believes in Santa and mine will be no exception; it brings them up the way they should be brought up.
It teaches them the spirit of Christmas	14
Unselfishness, the spirit of giving; has spiritual implications; is more the Christmas spirit and helps them religiously.
Children need something to believe in	5
It's like God, almost a spirit. They have to have faith in something.
It encourages them to be good	1
Other reasons	6

(This table adds to more than 100 per cent because more than one answer was possible.)

The few people who thought it a bad idea to teach children about Santa Claus tended to have lower incomes and educations than average, although a number of the college-educated also had objections to him.

Against Santa Claus this group has the following counts: Children will find it out eventually and then won't trust their parents (43 per cent); the shock and disillusionment is too great when they find it out, it's bad for the child and for his outlook on life (32 per cent); it is falsehood (29 per cent). A few also stated that Christmas has become too commercial, and that more emphasis should be placed on the religious nature of the holiday.

Said a woman of 56 with a grown son: "Christmas spirit should be the observance of the Christ birth. People go to extremes at Christmas. They go crazy buying things." And another woman of 35 said: "You always have to look forward to the time you'll have to break the child's faith in Santa Claus. We live in a material age. It's a waste of time and places a burden on parents to lead the child to believe in the moon."

But on the other side, a young mother, wife of an attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital, said: "Up until 12 years they should believe. There's so much fun, spirit and beauty in it. After they stop believing it takes all the joy out of it. When it came time, I explained that Santa Claus was really Ma and Pa. Santa Claus came in spirit through Ma and Pa. Santa Claus brought things, but he had to be paid for these things."

Acceptance of New Fiance May Keep Italian Girl in U. S.

New York, Dec. 21 (U.P.)—A heartbroken Italian girl who lost her American GI fiance in an automobile accident while she was coming to marry him accepted a new fiance tonight.

From him, 21-year-old Maria Formicola received fresh hope that she might be allowed to stay in this country.

Frank P. (Chicco) Alfidi, 27, an accordion teacher in Yonkers, N. Y., disclosed he had talked his way onto Ellis Island and persuaded Maria, with whom he had been corresponding in Italy, to marry him.

He immediately sent telegrams to President Truman and Attorney General Tom Clark asking their aid in preventing immigration authorities from sending Miss Formicola back to Italy.

He was assured of aid from 10 New York cousins of Maria. They had announced earlier they would fight to a finish to keep her in America.

Alfidi said that when he got out of the Navy he began writing to Maria at the suggestion of a friend, although he had never met her. Then when he learned she had fallen in love with a GI in Italy he "dropped out of the picture."

Thursday he read of her arrival and the tragic news of her fiance's death while she was en route.

"I figured she is a victim of circumstances, and I do love her, so yesterday I bought a ring and took it to her today," Alfidi said. "She accepted."

He told Mr. Truman that the acceptance was made in writing and implored:

"I beg of you, Mr. President, to try and help this girl and I so that she may stay in this good country of the USA, so that we may may both be married and raise a happy family."

He said he would go to Philadelphia Monday to attend a hearing on the deportation order before the commissioner of immigration. Also at the hearing will be Miss Formicola's New York relatives, who said they would go in a body to protest her removal.

Closed Shop Issue Behind Printers' Plea for Strike Vote

Closed shop provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act lie behind yesterday's decision of Washington printers to ask the International Typographical Union for permission to take a strike vote.

For five months negotiators have been looking for a settlement that would:

1. Conform to the law as it is interpreted by the four Washington newspapers, and

2. Preserve the union's organizational security as that is viewed by the union.

Wage Issue Secondary

There also has been a wage issue but that might have been settled by now if there had been no closed shop problem.

The local dispute is similar to that existing in many other parts of the country between the International Typographical Union and publishers of daily newspapers and commercial print shops.

The ITU, headed by President Woodruff Randolph, has declined to sign labor contracts because the Taft-Hartley Act forbids closed shop contracts. It has proposed, instead, to post conditions under which union members will work. President Randolph believes that this method leaves the union free to undertake a legal strike if a publisher tries to break a union or violates the posted rules enforcing a closed shop.

The American Newspapers Publishers Association has accused President Randolph of refusing to bargain collectively and charges that he declines to sign a contact. Hearings on these allegations will be aired before a National Labor Relations Board trial examiner in Washington this morning.

Negotiations Started In August

Local negotiations started early in August. At that time extension of the existing closed shop contract would have been legal, for the Taft-Hartley Act did not become effective until August 22. But no agreements was reached on the extension.

On September 6, the union told the publishers it intended to end its contract on the November 11 expiration date. On September 8, the publishers told the union they wished to negotiate for a new contract.

Efforts to re-write the contract were carried on until early in November. It proved impossible to reconcile President Randolph's "no contract" policy and the publishers' views.

Early in November the negotiators tried a new approach. They attempted to work out a short form "memorandum of agreement." This was first suggested by the publishers. It developed in conference by suggestions from both sides. It called for a year's agreement on economic issues such as wages, hours, vacations and holidays. It would have continued in effect old contract provisions "which do not violate any local or Federal law," pending further negotiations. Either party could have broken off negotiations on 60 days notice. The publishers proposed, as a part of this memorandum, wage increases of 11 cents an hour and later increased the offer to 15 cents an hour.

Wage Agreement Opposed

The union balked at the year's agreement on wages, maintaining that a strike on wage issues is the only clearly legal strike under the Taft-Hartley Act.

On November 11, when the old contract expired, both sides agreed to continue negotiations, following a conference attended by a representative of the United States Conciliation Service.

President Randolph joined the negotiations on December 2 and 3, but did not approve the short form memorandum. He declared his insistence on the closed shop, on the exemption of union workers from any requirement that they handle struck work, and on union jurisdiction over all work in composing rooms.

On December 10, a memorandum agreement, somewhat improved from the printers view point, was presented to union negotiators. The publishers, under the impression that the printers were satisfied with the memorandum agreement, made a wage increase offer of 20 cents an hour. This would mea na weekly increase of $7 for the 35-hour week.

Union Demands Presented

On December 17, the union negotiators expressly denied they had ever agreed to the memorandum agreement. They demanded, instead, a contract that could be canceled in its entirety on 60 days notice, and a wage increase of $10.50 a week.

The publishers then wrote James J. O'Conner, president of the local, that the union negotiators had stated in negotiations that the memorandum met the local's requirements and also asserted no member of the union committee had expressed reservations about it. They told him that they therefore concluded that there had been a "change of front" as the result of Randolph's disapproval. In view of this, they withdrew their offer but advised that they would be glad to meet with union negotiators if the local could demonstrate its independent authority.

On December 18, in another letter, the publishers expanded on their position. They suggested that further negotiations might prove fruitful if the local negotiators had "wider authority" and explicit power to negotiate the sort of memorandum of agreeemnt previously under discussion. They offered, in any case, to consider any proposals the union had to make. But they expressed doubt that progress would be made if the union held to its position.

Memorandum Is Denounced

The union committee, in a memorandum to members, said the letters of the publishers were based on a "false premise" that the scale committee had accepted without qualification the memorandum agreement. It accused the publishers of trying to deal directly with employes of the composing rooms.

In their monthly Official Bulletin the union committee denounced the "memorandum of agreement." They declared that its acceptance "would be tantamount to the acceptance of a contract and would sabotage the fight made by our International (the ITU) . . . to preserve the rights of its members."

"By agreeing to accept settlement of economic issues for a period of a year," the committee said, "you would put your union in a strait jacket that would not permit it to do anything, no matter what your employers decided to do."

Union Defends Stand

Throughout the controversy, national and local, Randolph and his attorneys have taken the position that their acts are perfectly "lawful," even though the union declines to sign a "legal" contract. The union has not decided to post conditions of employment on a "take it or leave it" basis, they declare.

Rather, they say, this process contemplates real collective bargaining, even though it does not result in a written contract. It is not flouting the law, the ITU argues, but rather living within it. The union says it is within its rights by eschewing a written agreement and thus avoiding some of the conditions which are prescribed only if the agreement is reduced to contract form.

During the course of the negotiations the publishers advised the union in writing that they would make retroactive to November 11 any wage adjustment incorporated in a contract agreed upon by January 11. This offer, the publishers have stated, still is outstanding.

Greek Writer Accredited to U. N. Arrested

By John Chabot Smith

New York, Dec. 21 (NYHT).—A Greek newspaperman accredited to the United Nations has been arrested and detained on Ellis Island in $5000 bail because the two Communist newspapers he represents were suppressed by the Greek government, it was disclosed today.

The arrest was made by the immigration and naturalization service of the United States Department of Justice. The newspaperman is Nicholas Kyriazedes, correspondent for Rizospatis and Eleftheria Ellada of Athens. The newspapers were suppressed October 18.

Though some details of the affair were lacking today it appeared that immigration officials acted on the assumption that Kyriazedes lost his U. N. status when his newspapers were suppressed. It also appeared that they regarded him as a Communist alien whose presence in this country became illegal as soon as he lost his U. N. status.

It was definitely learned that the arrest was made without consulting U. N.; that Kyriazedes' U. N. accreditation was still good at the time of his arrest; that the initial reaction of the U. N. was to inform the immigration service and the State Department of this fact, and to expect the immediate release of Kyriazedes, and that after a telephone conversation between representatives of the U. N. and the State Department, the whole picture changed.

Now, according to the U. N. representative, "consultatoins" will take place between the U. N. and the State Department regarding the whole question of procedures for accrediting Communists and other newspapermen to the U. N. The procedure will be tightened up with the special purpose of keeping foreign Communists out of the United States.

ITO Charter Unsatisfactory To Argentina

Havana, Dec. 21 (A.P.).—Argentina apparently closed the door today on joining the United States-backed International Trade Organization.

Dr. Diego Luis Molinari, chief Argentine delegate to the current trade conference here, said in an interview his country would make no compromise on several disputed points and "could not unreservedly accept" the proposed ITO charter with articles opposed to Argentina's "vital national interests."

He listed as the principal points of conflict the "most favored nation" clause, controls on State trading and public business enterprises, and foreign exchange regulations.

He emphasized, however, that his delegation will continue in the deliberations and that he will return after a trip to the United States to spend Christmas with his three sons.

Perhaps the most important Argentine-American conflict is over the most-favored-nation clause. This provides that "any advantage, favor, privilege or immunity granted by any member" to any other country in international trade "shall be accorded immediately and unconditionally to all other member countries."

Argentina has proposed amending this article to provide that its extension of favors must be "on a reciprocal and mutually advantageous basis."

The United States contends that the most-favored-nation article is the core of the charter and that international trade can be fostered only by a general freeing of restrictions.

'Kidding,' Says GOP Senator Of Price Bill

A Republican Senator yesterday charged his own party leaders with "trying to kid the public" with their anti-inflation bill which now lies on the President's desk.

Democratic sources, on the other hand, maintained that Mr. Truman would not be influenced by political considerations whether he signs or vetoes the measure. These Democrats felt his wisest course would be to give the Republican program a trial and then be in stronger position to ask for more drastic powers if it fails.

Senator Wilson, former Governor of Iowa, was the Republican who took issue with the anti-inflation plan of his colleagues. He said the bill, hastily passed in the closing hours of the special session, "doesn't mean anything."

Doesn't Favor Kidding

"I'm not in favor of kidding the public," Wilson said. "This bill won't accomplish anything, and anybody who studies it will soon find that out."

He was one of three Republican Senators who voted against the measure. The others were Senators Morse (R., Oreg.), and Langer (R., N. Dak.).

The present bill was the result of almost single-handed effort by Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Republican Policy Committee and presidential candidate. Although his success in pushing the measure through both Houses after a similar bill had been killed in the House was taken as an index of his political strength, it was conceded failure of the program he sponsored would likely be blamed on him.

Taft Sees Enough Powers

Of his bill, the Ohioan said yesterday: "The President will have all the powers he needs to fight inflation; if he will only use them."

Speaker Martin (R., Mass.), said the three-point voluntary plan was "just a start" and left the impression his party would come back next year with a long range domestic economic program.

Representative Landis (R. Ind.) questioned whether the Administration really wanted to stop inflation. He said that "according to some of the New Deal spokesmen they want to keep prices and taxes high in order to maintain their present spending program."

A special negotiating meeting between representatives of the union and the publishers was held at 10 a. m. yesterday at the initiative of Clyde M. Mills and James A. Holden of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in an effort to reach an agreement before the union meeting.

A spokesman for the publishers said the publishers, at their meeting with the union early yesterday, agreed to further negotiations at the call of the conciliators. The union, however, declared negotiations on a local level could be taken out of its hands by the international union, as a result of the request to authorize a strike vote.

James J. O'Connor, president of the Columbia Typographical Union, who announced the result of the printers' vote, refused any other comment stating that further action rests with the international union.

Kemp Asked Stand in Arlington Suit

B. Alden Lilywhite, chairman of the Arlington citizens' committee for school improvement, last night asked Arlington School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp to say how he stands in the county's current school controversy.

Incumbent school board members filed a suit December 13 challenging the right of the new board elected in November to take office under the State legislative act authorizing the school board election.

"Superintendent Kemp has been carrying out the policies of the old appointed school board for several years," Lilywhite said in a prepared statement. "In view of this, Superintendent Kemp owes it to Arlington parents, taxpayers further delay specifically where he and voters to announce without stands in relation to the old and new school boards and to state publicly his position with regard to this current school board suit."

Meyers Inquiry Due To Lead Far Afield

Grand Juries to Act on Federal Corruption Unprecedented in History, Official Declares

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A sweeping Justice Department investigation of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, retired AAF officer, will soon result in grand juries hearing charges involving official corruption unprecedented in United States history, a spokesman said last night.

Meyers, 52-year-old wartime chief of the Army Air Forces Materiel Command, will be arraigned here January 7 on three counts of perjury and three counts of corruptly procuring false testimony from another person.

With the grand jury presentation of perjury charges now out of the way, the Justice Department is preparing to move full steam ahead on a battery of other counts, which may include war fraud, conspiracy to commit war fraud, bribery, attempted extortion, extortion and conspiracy to defraud.

Check Income Tax

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is likewise pressing ahead on its investigation of possible charges of income tax evasion and conspiracy to evade the income tax.

The Treasury Department has not yet turned over its reports in these income tax cases to the Justice Department which means that the evidence is not all in and the case or cases ready for prosecution.

The Justice Department said that cases arising out of the Meyers investigation will be presented to grand juries in more than one jurisdiction.

There was no indication of when such cases might begin to be prosecuted, but Justice Department officials expressed satisfaction at the speedy progress of their inquiry.

A new grand jury will be called here January 6, but the Justice Department has not asked District Attorney George Morris Fay to set aside time for presentation of evidence.

Special Panel Hinted

It is believed likely that a special grand jury may be impaneled because of the anticipated length of time it will take the Government to present all of its evidence.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark has named Assistant Attorney General T. Vincent Quinn, ace Justice Department prosecutor and chief of the criminal division, to handle the Meyers case.

The perjury and subornation of perjury cases were handled by Fay and Assistant District Attorney Edward Molenof.

A sensational story of the AAF procurement officer's wartime harvest of golden profits from an aviation accessories company was recently disclosed by a Senate War Investigating subcommittee headed by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.). The committee also had evidence of Meyers' wartime holdings in aviation stocks and his 10-million-dollar speculations in Government war bonds.

Military and civil authorities of the Government are agreed that never before in the history of the United States has there been any case of official corruption with so many ramifications as this has presented.

Casts Begin to Gather

As the Government hurried with preparations to stage another phase in its action against Meyers, one of the most brilliantly colorful casts of witnesses ever assembled began to gather in the wings.

Take the question of attempted extortion, with which the Senate committee charged Meyers upon evidence that he sought a $200,000 loan from a war contractor with whom he was dealing for the Government.

Part of the cast for this one is Howard Hughes, the lanky multi-millionaire plane builder from the West, who said he refused Meyers the loan. Still another figure in this case is Neil S. McCarthy, noted Los Angeles polo player, a florid whitehaired attorney, who showed he could handle a Senate committee with as much skill as he can a jury.

Slim, blond Ira Rae Curnutt, the general's third wife, a former Hollywood actress and mother of Meyers' three small children, figures in this one, too.

Take the case of war fraud, and conspiracy to commit it.

Some Characters Vague

Some of the characters in this one will have to remain vague and shadowy until the Government begins to send them one-by one onto the stage before a jury.

But somewhere in the dark recesses of the wings are a couple of other high-ranking generals, and moving restlessly in the shadows are some airplane manufacturers who up to now have figured only briefly if at all on the scene.

Are they villains or heroes?

The jury will have to decide.

On stage in nearly every scene—whether it's income tax or conspiracy—will be two major characters, Mr. and Mrs. Bieriot H. Lamarre of Dayton, Ohio.

Painted As Temptress

Meyers has painted Mrs. Lamarre as the beautiful temptress for whose sake he embarked on his disastrous career of undercover establishment of an airplane accessories factory.

Meyers said the blond, reedy 35-year-old Lamarre, "dummy" president of Meyers' Aviation Electric Corp., knew his wife was the general's "girl friend" and didn't mind.

Lamarre in turn said Meyers was a "liar and a snake" and Mrs. Lamarre prepared to sue for slander.

As the $51.50-a-week bookkeeper, and "dummy" president of the Aviation Electric Co., Lamarre knows and has told more about the general's dizzying wartime financial transactions than any other witness.

Intricate Deals Told

He has painted a picture of intricate and undercover financial deals whereby he flew to Washington to give the general envelopes stuffed with greenbacks to pay for a succession of wartime luxuries.

The Justice Department is not alone in working to line up a case.

The Army and the Air Force have had in preparation for many weeks charges on which Meyers can be court martialed when the civil authorities give the nod. Without legal sanction, the Air Force has stripped Meyers of his $550-a-month disability retirement pay, and has removed his Distinguished Service Medal and Legion of Merit.

Meanwhile, President Truman and a House subcommittee on the Armed Services are studying a list of some 30,000 other officers receiving disability retirement pay.

On both sides of the Capitol there will be moves after Congress returns to strike from the list any officers not genuinely disabled. Meanwhile the Treasury Department has recommended that Congress revise laws governing disability retirement pay for officers so that it is based on the actual extent of the disability.

Plane Beats Sound Speed, Magazine Says

By The Associated Press

Aviation Week magazine will say in an issue dated today that an experimental rocket plane, the Bell XS-1, has flown faster than the speed of sound on several occasions during the past month.

There have been persistent rumors that the sonic barrier had been breached by the XS-1 but Defense Secretary Forrestal forbade any official disclosure under security regulations issued specifically to cover Air Force progress in high-speed flight.

The speed of sound generally is stated as 760 miles an hour, but this relates to standard conditions of 59 degrees Fahrenheit at sea level altitude. The speed of sound varies up to 100 miles an hour in either direction as the temperature rises or descends.

Aviation Week will say that the first flight faster than sound was made at Muroc Air Base, Calif., more than a month ago by Capt. Charles Yeager and that since then the speed has been duplicated several times by Yeager and Test Pilots Howard Lilly and Herbert Hoover of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, the government's top aviation research agency.

The XS-1, which is powered by four rocket motors and is launched from the belly of a B-29, was built as an experimental aircraft in a cooperative effort between the air force and NACA.

The magazine said that the XS-1 had been timed by radar and had flown at altitudes of 40,000 to 70,000 feet.

The biggest surprise of the little plane's achievement, aviation week says, is the absence of numerous anticipated difficulties near the speed of sound.

Robert H. Wood, editor of Aviation Week, said he had withheld the story for several weeks at the request of Air Force officials and with the understanding that the Air Force also would withhold it. He decided to release the story, he said, after Aviation Week had learned that the Air Force is preparing a release on the fact that the XS-1 has exceeded the speed of sound. (An Air Force spokesman said today that it is not preparing such a release.)

Muroc Commander Denies Flight Story

Muroc Army Air Field, Cal., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Col. S. A. Gilkey, commanding officer of this test base, denied today that the Bell XS-1 had flown through the barrier of sound.

"There is no foundation to the rumor," he said. "I knew nothing about it in advance of this story. It was a big surprise to me because, if it had happened, I would have known about it.

"I have since checked Wright Field (Dayton, Ohio, headquarters for all Army test work) and they tell me there is nothing to it and that if there had been, I would have been notified."

Hitler Warned Of Defeat Soon After D-Day

London, Dec. 21 (AP).—German commanders warned Hitler of defeat in the west within six weeks after the Allied armies landed on June 6, 1944, German army documents made public tonight by the British War Office disclosed.

On July 22 Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge, who had taken over command of German troops on the invasion front from Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, reported to Hitler:

"The moment has drawn near when this front — already so heavily strained—will break. And once the enemy is in open country an orderly command will hardly be practicably with the insufficient mobility of our troops.

"There is no way by which, in the face of the enemy air force's complete command, we can find a strategy which will counterbalance its actually annihilating effect without giving up the field of battle.

"I came here with the fixed determination of making effective your order to stand fast at any price. But when one has to see by experience that this price must be paid by the slow but sure annihilation of the force . . . anxiety about the immediate future of this front is only too well justified."

On July 24 the headquarters staff of German Army Group B reported that German losses from June 6 to July 23 totaled 116,863 men, including 10 generals, 8 general staff officers and 158 commanders.

Pauley Data Called For

of commodity speculation and related subjects was shaping up meantime under the direction of Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.).

Andresen abandoned his holiday plans and prepared to stay in the Capital over Christmas to assemble a staff for his special seven-man committee. He indicated that the House inquiry will be broadened to include the politically controversial question of just how much prices have been affected by Government purchases of grain and other commodities for shipment abroad.

Another committee objective, he said, will be an investigation of foreign citizens allegedly trading on United States markets without paying income taxes on their profits.

Publication of the list of speculators was authorized by a joint resolution rushed through both Houses of Congress in less than 24 hours last week, and signed by President Truman minutes after it reached the White House.

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, with Mr. Truman's complete backing, had insisted such a special law must be enacted to legalize his publication of hitherto-confidential Government records on the commodity markets.

Text of Letter

The text of Ferguson's letter to Pauley follows:

"I have attempted to reach you by telephone and I have been informed by your office that you are not expected to return there until sometime after the first of January.

"I wish to recall to your attention your agreement with the Senate Committee on Appropriations in hearings December 10 that you would make available to it your books and records covering the transactions that were discussed with you in the hearings of that date.

"That agreement was made at my suggestion inasmuch as I had asked that the committee conduct another session with that information before it. Notwithstanding your absence from the city it is my hope that you will submit those books and records in order that the professional staff of the committee may undertake a study of them without further delay. I therefore ask that they be delivered to Dr. Thomas J. Graves, director of the professional staff of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, as soon as possible."

from a man who told him there "might" be a dead woman at the 7th st. address. Lieutenant Wanamaker said the man hung up before he could get his name.

About 10 minutes later, Pvt. Nelson G. Thayer, patrol signal officer at the Second Precinct, received a telephone call from a man who identified himself as George Austin. He told Thayer that he and his wife had had an argument and that she "might be shot." Austin said he was then at his sister's home at 29 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Policeman's Report

Detective Sergt. George W. Cook of the homicide squad who was assigned to the case, reached the Austin apartment a few minutes later and found Mrs. Austin clad in a pink night gown, maroon housecoat and black fur-trimmed mules, sitting in an overstuffed chair with the gun in her hand.

Police found two empty shells on the floor. They said there was no evidence of a struggle although there was some blood splattered on the floor. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald reached the scene of the shooting at about 3:30 yesterday morning and pronounced Mrs. Austin dead.

Police said Austin first told them he had bought the revolver "about two days ago," for protection. He said that on the day he bought it, he had shown his wife how to operate it.

Story About Weapon

In the same statement, however, police said, he told them that he had not know how to operate the weapon, and had taken it to his sister's home where Lee had shown him how to handle the gun.

At that time, Austin said, the gun was unloaded, but he had a box of cartridges for it.

"Several hours later," Austin said, he had left the Rhode Island ave. address with Mrs. Grattan and Lee and they had dropped him off near his home.

After the shooting, Austin told police, he had returned to his sister's home, where she and Lee found him when they came back from having dinner.

Police said Austin is a truck driver for the Cowan Transfer Co. Mrs. Austin was identified as a $2394 bookkeeping machine operator in the transportation division of the State Department. She formerly worked at Treasury Procurement Division and the OPA, according to State Department officials.

Chicago Police Question Trio In Gang Ride

Chicago, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Police seized three men today for questioning about a gang ride—the result of a battle over Christmas loot—from which one of two intended victims escaped by plunging from the gang's speeding car though he was bound and gagged.

Police were making a citywide search for the second victim, but believed he had been slain. They commented that the case was "similar" to the gang murder a week ago which ended with four men dead and two wounded seriously.

The man who escaped from the one-way ride was identified by police as Joseph Radek, 22. He is in serious condition from a gang beating and injuries suffered in the plunge from the car.

He said he knew his missing companion only as "Eddie." He told detectives that Eddie, also bound and gagged, still was in the kidnap car when he managed to lean against the door handle and fall out as the car sped along a city street last night.

TOMORROW'S COURSE CAN BE CHARTED TODAY

I can hardly keep up with the present!

Many a man is being poked by his conscience because he has not yet settled the problem of the future—the problem of his estate. Planning ahead takes thought, study, time—and who today has time?

In these days every one with property should make plans for his family's future. Action now saves estate settlement costs and taxes. Ask any one who has settled an estate.

Consider also who is to manage the estate. Isn't it better to secure group judgment in important decisions—to have trained personnel handle all details—to use our specialists in taxation and investment? Our many years of experience in managing living trusts and trusts under will are available to you at no greater cost.

We welcome inquiry from you or your attorney or both. Let us plan together to save your heirs the losses of haphazard estate settlement—the losses of inexperienced management.

'Keep Christ in Christmas,' Theme of Pre-Yule Sermons

Worshipers attending Christmas Sunday services yesterday were urged to "keep Christ in Christmas."

Dr. Carl Heath Kopf in his sermon at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., declared:

"The real heart of Christmas is to be devoted not only to the infant Jesus but also to the mature Jesus who follows after the Child. There were many people who worshipped Jesus as a baby but forsook Him when He became a full-grown man.

"He asked too much of them. His way was too hard. He was an adorable baby, but as a Saviour He was a Master who asked all of life."

Asks Practice of Precepts

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., said the Christmas spirit is best expressed by practical application of Christ's precepts in everyday life.

"Christmas means more than high-sounding phrases and mere participation in Christmas services —it means total surrender to Christ's way of life," said Dr. L. Ralph Tabor at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle.

The approach of Christmas also was reflected in the musical programs, highlighted by the presentation of Handel's popular oratorio, "The Messiah," at New York Avenue Presbyterian, National Baptist Memorial, Mount Vernon Place Methodist, Clarendon (Va.) Methodist, Nineteenth Street Baptist and Metropolitan Baptist Churches, among others. Numerous Yule plays and pageants also were given.

Pageants Twenty-third Year

Meanwhile, churchgoers look forward to Christmas Eve and Christmas Day services, as well as other seasonal programs this week. Catholic churches will celebrate midnight masses Christmas Eve. Protestant churches will hold communion and other services.

Among the leading Christmas programs presented yesterday was the thenty-third annual showing of "The White Christmas Pageant" at West Washington Baptist Church, 31st and N sts. nw., and the fourteenth annual presentation of "The New Born King" at Fifteenth Street Christian Church, 15th st. and Kentucky ave. se. Robert L. Haycock, retired superintendent of the District Public Schools, and a longtime member of West Washington Church, wrote the "White Christmas Pageant" in 1924, when it scored such a hit that the congegation demanded an annual showing.

Creche Service Today

Among the Christmas church programs for this week are:

The annual children's creche service will take place today at 4 p. m. in the Children's Chapel of the Washington Catherdal. Canon Precentor Crawford W. Brown will preside. Meanwhile, plans for a service for the deaf on Christmas Day at 11 a. m. at the Cathedral were announced.

The Metropolitan Police Band will play carols Wednesday at noon in St. Patrick's Hall, 10th and G sts. nw.

An innovation in radio church programs will be heard Christmas Day at 9:45 a. m. over WTOP, as the National Lutheran Chorus presents a concert via magnetic tape recording. The half-hour program was recorded last week at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle. Raymond Pilkerson, boy soprano, will be featured.

Six Perish When New Home Burns

Camden, S. C., Dec. 1 (AP).—A widow and six of her family were burned fatally in a kerosene blast and flash fire last night as they gathered in a new farm home for a pre-Christmas reunion near the Bethune community.

Raymond Melton, 21, dragged all seven from the flaming room and he was near death today in a local hospital. The family had moved from another farm into the home yesterday.

The victims were: Mrs. Maebelle Melton, 47; two sons, Cecil and Clayton; two daughters, Bonnie Bell Melton and Mrs. Ella Melton Wright, 17; a grandson, Ronnie Lee Melton, 8 months old, and a granddaughter, Mildred Louise Wright, 19 months.

A fire was made in an open grate to warm the newly occupied house, and was started with kerosene splashed from a five-gallon can onto green logs. The can was set nearby and apparently fumes from it touched off the blast. The room became a furnace in seconds.

Raymond Melton, who was farthest from the fireplace, made seven trips into the flames to drag his mother and the other victims outside. They all died during the night in a Camden hospital. The house was partially destroyed.

Philippine Leader Dies While Awaiting Trial

Manila, Dec. 21 (AP).—Benigno S. Aquino, one of the most powerful political figures in the Philippines, died last night while awaiting tral on charges of treason for collabcratng with the Japanese.

Aquino was stricken with a heart attack while watching the battamweight championship bout between Manuel Ortiz and Tirso del Rosario.

Aquino, a man in his fifties, was secretary of the interior under President Manuel Quezon. When the Japanese occupied the Philppines, he became speaker of the Japanese puppet assembly and headed the Japanese-sponsored totalitarian Kalibapi Political Association.

Long a Mission

Alexandria Chapel to Be Boys' Club

Good Shepherd Chapel—for a half-century a mission of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Alexandria—soon will become the St. Paul's Boys Club.

It is to be an interdenominational project, conducted by the boys, the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, St. Paul's rector, said, in announcing plans for the club.

Fraser said the club "can become an example of Christian community work as it fulfills a great need in its own neighborhood." St. Paul's Church is on South Pitt st., and the chapel is at Franklin and South Fairfax sts.

Program Conducted

For some time, members of the Chapel have been conducting a social and recreational program for youths and young adults in the Chapel building. After approval of the club project by the St. Paul's vestry and rector, the last services of the chapel were held December 7.

"In recent years, the needs of the neighborhood have changed, Fraser said. "Regular worship services and the church school have been moved to St. Paul's, and a large number of people have sought homes elsewhere with the increased construction of high-cost dwellings in the neighborhood. It was with these thoughts in mind that the executive committee of the Chapel of which Mrs. Joseph Boland is chairman, suggested that the space be converted for youth activities."

Many Services Held

The Chapel was established by the Rev. Samuel A. Wallis, a professor at the Episcopal Theological Seminary; Miss Gault Norton and Mrs. Hubert Snowden. Many seminarians have conducted services there down through the years. The Misses Elizabeth and Edith Snowden, while not members of St. Paul's, were workers at the mission for years.

Tower Carillon Dedicated In St. Luke Church Ceremony

A new Tower Carillon was dedicated yesterday at the St. Luke Lutheran Church, Colesville rd. and Highland dr., Silver Spring.

The dedication, conducted by the Rev. Robert E. Lee, pastor and former Navy chaplain, took place during a "Christmas Sunday" musicale by the choir, directed by Mrs. Robert C. Steele. Harvey Harding, baritone, and musical director of the Mutual network's "Faith in Our Time" program, was soloist with the St. Luke choir.

The Carillon was a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Landis of Silver Spring, in honor of Mrs. Landis' mother, Mrs. Alta L. Harne. The carillon, electrically-controlled, is played from the Landis Memorial Organ. The bells have a five-mile range. The dedicatory service was broadcast over WGAY, Silver Spring.

Stassen Asks U. S. to Build Cheap Housing

Harold E. Stassen, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, called upon the Government to spend one billion dollars a year on low-cost housing. In an interview broadcast last night over Station WINX, the former Governor of Minnesota criticized the Administration housing program as one of "bungling and unpardonable incompetence."

Stassen attacked the record of the Truman administration. He said: "There would be more houses completed right now if owners had been permitted to proceed without a Government program." He singled out for particular criticism the material allocations and OPA price ceilings of the Government program.

Stassen emphatically stated that he did not want the Government to become a landlord. Instead, he proposed that the Government build dwellings in the metropolitan centers and then sell these structures to owner cooperatives and other private investors.

Touching on the problem of health, Stassen indorsed Federal insurance of hospital and medical bills for all Social Security card holders. He indorsed the installation of additional hospitals and health centers through Federal, State, and private aid. He specifically opposed a national health insurance plan such as contained in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill.

The former Governor advocated better facilities for Negro Americans, not only in health benefits but in voting and employment rights as well.

U. S. to Hand Swiss Check for $1,056,052

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Curtis LeMay, chief of United States Air Forces in Europe, said today he plans to fly to Berne, Switzerland, tomorrow to hand the Swiss government a check for $1,056,052.

The money will be in payment for food, clothing, medical treatment and other services given by the Swiss to American fliers who landed or crashed and were interned there during the war.

4 USO Clubs in Washington, And All Others, to Close Friday

All remaining USO clubs, including four in Washington, will end their activities Friday, the New York headquarters has announced.

At the same time, the national board of directors announced the formation of a "liquidating organization" that will dispose of USO property and distribute funds among USO organizations.

The last four of Washington's clubs, which would be six years old in February, are the H st. club, at 1911 H st. nw., the YWCA, at 17th and K sts. nw., the Georgia ave. club, at 2011 Georgia ave. nw., and the 10th st. club, at 918 10th st. nw.

At the peak, in 1946, there were 20 clubs in Washington. The national top was hit in 1944, when 3035 USO clubs were in operation, and numerous camp shows all over the world.

The public contributed about 250 million dollars to keep the clubs and shows going, and most of the work was done by a million and a half volunteers. Paid employes never exceeded 5000.

There are to be 12 members of the board of directors of the "liquidating trustee" organization, instead of 50, which the organization has at present. The executive committee has been abolished, and membership in the corporation has been reduced from 60 to 8.

The USO includes the YMCA, the YWCA, National Catholic Community Service, the Salvation Army, the National Jewish Welfare Board, and the National Travelers' Aid Society.

2 British Soldiers Wounded By Jews; 3 Killings Listed

Jerusalem, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Jewish gunmen gravely wounded a British lieutenant and sergeant major today while they were strolling through Jerusalem and one Arab and two Jews were killed in scattered clashes.

The British soldiers were shot on King George ave. a few hundred yards from the Jewish Agency Building. Witnesses said they saw two Jews running away as the soldiers fell.

An Arab was killed and two others wounded in a shooting scrape at Safad in northern Palestine. The British clamped a curfew on the area.

A Jewish truck driver and his assistant were stabbed to death between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem.

Other reports of violence from various parts of the Holy Land today included:

Twenty-five Jews were said to have attacked an Arab quarter on the Ramla Jerusalem road, damaging three houses with bombs. In Haifa an Arab was found dead. One Arab was shot to death and a second wounded in the vicinity of Tel Aviv.

Three passengers in an Arab bus were reported killed by a band dressed in the uniform of deputy constables in the Palestine police, near Ramallah.

Reliable reports said the anti-partition war was about to enter its second phase—the shifting of the fighting from the cities to the countryside.

Haj Amin el Husseini, the exiled Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, who is in Cairo, was reported to have ordered the shift—towns and cities could not stand the loss from arson and bombings.

Seven Friars Sentenced by Tito Regime

Belgrade, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Communist newspaper Borba reported today the sentencing of seven friars to forced labor for terms ranging from six months to six years on charges of engaging in acts against the Tito government.

They were accused of organizing an underground railroad for escape of "Ustashi and Chetnik war criminals" and for collecting political and economic information for foreign powers, Borba said.

Borba said that Brother Tavchar, parochial priest, and one of the principal defendants, was in close contact in 1945 with Friar Modesto Martinic of Zagreb, one of the co-defendants in the trial of Archbishop Stepinac. The archbishop in 1946 was sentenced to 16 years in prison, on charges of collaborating with the Nazis.

The defendants were charged with establishing a railroad underground station and assisting "war criminals" in getting into Austria. Borba said the defendants admitted their guilt but contended they did not know the persons involved were "war criminals."

Advice From Mr. Gutt

In a recent address, Camille Gutt, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, stressed the importance of monetary reform to restore confidence in national currencies. Without such confidence, as he explains, people refuse to produce and sell goods. As an alternative to hoarding cash businessmen hoard inventories for fear they will be unable to replace them and embark on investment activities that use up scarce resources and are not immediately productive. For these reasons Mr. Gutt concludes that monetary stabilization must be emphasized in any program for "rebuilding a self-sustaining Europe."

To achieve such stability comprehensive budget balancing is essential to shut off one of the main sources of inflation. The Marshall Plan itself, Mr. Gutt optimistically points out, would further programs of monetary reform. For it would bring into the countries aided goods sold for local currencies. These local currencies would go into the hands of the monetary authorities and reduce the supply of currency and deposits in the hands of the public. If such receipts are immobilized, that is, not used to meet budgetary deficits or to sustain an uneconomic level of investment, the money supply will be reduced instead of rising with the increased supply of goods. Mr. Gutt concludes, therefore, that every country participating in the Marshall Plan ought to limit Government expenditures for all purposes to actual tax recipts without depending in any way on the local currency proceeds of the import surplus (from the Marshall Plan) to meet such expenditures. This is sound advice that future administrators of the plan will do well to heed.

Tighter Export Control

Passage of the GOP anti-inflation bill, which the President is expected to sign, will insure the extension for another year of governmental control over exports, due to expire at the end of February. Congress also granted the Administration's request for a strengthening of export controls by authorizing the use of price criteria either by giving preference to applicants for licenses charging the lowest prices for comparable goods, or, in exceptional cases, by fixing reasonable mark-ups in export prices over domestic prices. Senator Taft, who spoke in favor of this proposal, expressed doubt as to its efficacy, pointing out that evasions would be comparatively easy. He also believes that the Department of Commerce already has the power to make price conditions in connection with its licensing powers. Nevertheless, a specific grant of authority will remove all doubts on that score and give the Office of International Trade the green light to go ahead with any plans it may have for disciplining profiteering exporters.

Protective regulations of this kind are much needed. For some exporters have not scrupled to take advantage of the opportunity to charge foreign buyers exorbitant prices for scarce and badly needed goods. We cannot make effective appeals to other nations to avoid profiteering at the expense of needy peoples, if our own exporters remain free to charge what the traffic will bear. Of course, in the absence of effective means of controlling inflation at home, the prices of goods exported will also rise. But the OIT can at least use the powers granted it by Congress to keep those prices in line with domestic prices. By so doing it will also further our efforts to assist the rehabilitation of other nations. The dollars that we give or lend for such purposes lose much of their value if the goods bought with them are sold at prices yielding exorbitant profits to United States exporters.

Russian Speculators

Even in Russia the expected sometimes happens. The Russians, too, are discovering that a system of fixed low prices not buttressed by rationing controls offers an irresistible temptation to speculative buying for resale at higher prices. A Moscow dispatch states that overshoes, reduced in price from 250 rubles to 45 rubles, and rubber boots, reduced from 1300 rubles to slightly more than 100 rubles, have been bought for resale at a profit. The names of nine persons engaged in this traffic have already been made public, and local authorities have been ordered to arrest anyone buying goods at reduced prices in state stores and reselling them.

It is possible that Russia will succeed where other nations have failed in suppressing this kind of black market profiteering, since a totalitarian government possesses weapons of intimidation that the government of free peoples hesitate to employ. But we doubt whether the Russians can be bullied or frightened into forgoing present tempting opportunities to profit at the expense of their fellow citizens. For there are many fairly easy ways of evading price-control regulations when scarce goods are sold without restriction to the lucky ones who are first on the scene. It is our guess that the Russian petty profiteer will run true to form and, like his American counterpart, devise schemes to carry on his antisocial activities under cover in defiance of authority.

D. C. Governor?

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d is properly concerned about maintaining a sound relationship between the Federal Government and the District under the home-rule system proposed by the Auchincloss Subcommittee. As chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, he is keenly aware of the fact that local and Federal interests are intertwined at many points here. He wishes to make certain that the enormous Federal interest in this Capital City is effectively safeguarded. With that objective we fully sympathize. Washington's chief raison d'etre is its special function as the seat of the Federal Government. Obviously the proposed home-rule regime must be adjusted to that situation.

We find it impossible, however, to follow General Grant in his suggestion that the new government should be headed by a governor to be appointed by the President. This smacks of a revival of the so-called territorial regime of the 1870s, which was brought to grief by presidentially appointed Governor Shepherd. If that ill-fated experiment alone is not enough to discredit the idea of creating a governorship for Washington, the confusion that would result from any such move ought to dissuade Congress from making it. Washington is neither a State nor a distant Federal Territory. In our opinion there is no place for a governor in the municipal regime that ought to be set up to manage its local affairs.

Under the Auchincloss plan control over local affairs would be lodged in a city council. Would the proposed governor be made responsible to this council? If so, then that official ought to be appointed by the council (not by the President) and serve at its pleasure, and he should be called a city manager. If the proposed governor were not to be responsible to the council, we should have two governments instead of one and indescribable confusion could be anticipated. We hesitate to think that General Grant had any such hodgepodge arrangement in mind. The Auchincloss Subcommittee, as its staff director, Dr. George Galloway, has pointed out, has already provided numerous safeguards to avoid unwarranted sacrifice of Federal interests to local interests under the home-rule plan. If further safeguards are needed, specific amendments as to the status of various agencies may well be discussed. But any attempt at this time to write a fundamentally different plan seems to us especially unfortunate.

Broken Homes

Signs of a more basic approach to the divorce problem than law passing or moral lecturing are increasing. Latest to advocate more long-range education and research on the subject is George Thorman, author of a new Public Affairs pamphlet, Broken Homes. After exploring the field of marriage breakdown for the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., a nonprofit, educational organization, Mr. Thorman comes up with the conclusion that tightening divorce laws will not cut the number of divorces. He does not think divorce is primarily a legal problem. Rather it is a problem of the physical and psychological adjustment of two persons, who if they find their "dissatisfactions unbearable" will find some way of breaking their legal bonds. Recalling our experience with prohibition, he says an unpopular, restrictive law on divorce could not be enforced. He points out that though States have been steadily tightening their divorce laws, divorce today is breaking up marriages three times as rapidly as it did a half century ago.

To attribute this to lenient marriage laws or prevailing moral laxity is superficial thinking, Mr. Thorman believes. Marriage, like other institutions, is trying to adapt itself to a rapidly changing world. Women particularly have a new attitude toward it. They will no longer endure cruelty or immorality just to make their marriages last. Both women and men expect more from marriage than formerly. In today's thinking a marriage is no longer "good" just because it lasts. The time has come, Mr. Thorman thinks, to quit muddling through in marriage in an unscientific way. He would bring the combined efforts of doctors, psychiatrists, educators, ministers and social workers to bear on the problem, and would provide more premarriage education, more marriage counseling, and above all more research on marriage failures and how to avoid them.

Predictions

While economists debate as to whether 1948 means boom or bust, the Old Farmers' Almanac, in its 156th issue, offers some auguries about the weather that may bear on this question. This winter is forecast as "white, long and cold" and the almanac's Mr. Weatherwise goes so far as to say the coming summer may be one of severe crop failures. He points out that it falls in a year of great sun-spot activity, as did the cold summer of 1816, when it snowed in July, birds froze in June, and there was frost every month. Mr. Weatherwise plays safe by emphasizing the "may," but he admits that he called the weather right for the last four winters—at least in his New England.

However, he has raised a question modern research is trying to answer: How does solar activity affect life on this planet? All sorts of theories about sun-spot cycles have been evolved, one being that sun-spot activity of varying degrees runs in 11- and in 22-year cycles. Some investigators have related sun spots to crops, business activity, stock market prices, uprisings, revolutions, social mass movements. One theory is that sun spots or solar eruptions are accompanied by increasing electrical activity, which generates more ozone in the air and stimulates man physically and psychologically.

While research in this field has just begun, it is generally regarded as being on the threshold of an important new field of knowledge that may help us predict activities of man as well as of the weather. As far as it has gone, it seems to be leading man back to something that the ancients divined, that the sun as well as the earth regulated human life. Anyway, we should know more about sun spots—and also the boom and bust question—after 1948.

Good Coal News

Millions of Europeans still shiver in unheated quarters and look forward with dread to the winter months that still lie ahead. But the pessimism of last year is gradually giving way to tempered optimism, as the coal output of Britain and the Ruhr begins to mount. In Britain production recently reached the highest weekly levels since 1940, and the year's total with three weeks to go was within striking distance of the 200-million-ton goal. The record is, in fact, so encouraging that the Minister of Fuel thinks it may be possible to export 10 million tons of coal next year instead of the 6 million promised by Britain at the Paris conference on the Marshall Plan.

Following the labor disturbances of the early fall, British miners have settled down to work longer hours. Absenteeism has been reduced, the labor force increased, new mine machinery installed, operations reorganized. Especially significant is the increased output per man-shift reaching the level of the last prewar year. In Germany efforts to step up production have also borne fruit. In his message to Congress on the Marshall Plan President Truman said that the daily output of the Ruhr mines had risen during the last few months from 230,000 to 290,000 tons.

These achievements are especially notable in view of the limited material incentives that European labor now has to increase output. With the Marshall Plan in operation, there would be reason to expect that the upward production trend would be accelerated and Europe's present dependence upon coal imports would rapidly diminish. The necessity of restoring and expanding the coal output of Great Britain and the Ruhr is obvious. For coal directly and indirectly is the basic source of the power required to keep industries running and goods moving.

These coal supplies should be obtained to the greatest possible extent from Europe's own mines. The aid we can give Europe in the form of coal exports is restricted by limited transportation facilities. Moreover, to the extent that Great Britain produces coal for export to Europe, the importing countries will have less need for American dollars and so will Britain. Coal from the Ruhr will likewise reduce Europe's demand for dollars and help to build up German exports, thus assisting efforts to put the western occupied areas on a self-sustaining basis.

Naming Names

Objection has been made to a statement in a Washington Post editorial on Saturday to the effect that the Republican leaders in the Senate wanted a secret look at the list of persons speculating on the commodity exchanges so that they could determine whether publication would provide political capital for them. There is some substance to the objection. The editorial failed to give due weight to the motion by Senator Ferguson before the Senate Appropriations Committee to the effect that Secretary of Agriculture Anderson be requested to furnish the list of speculators in open session. This motion was supported by Chairman Bridges and seven other Republican members of the committee, but was defeated by the votes of nine Democrats plus Senators Saltonstall and Gurney.

It is true, as we pointed out, that the committee thus backed down and did not force publication of the list when Secretary Anderson said he would make it available to the public if the committee insisted on seeing it without the enactment of a resolution authorizing the disclosures. But the blocking at this point came chiefly from Democratic Senators, apparently because they believed that disclosure of the names without specific authorization from Congress would be illegal. In any event, it is clear from the vote on the Ferguson resolution that eight Republican members of the committee were eager to have the list of speculators disclosed to the public and Congress last Thursday. We regret that in the rush of events at the end of the session our editorial neglected to give this fact the consideration that it merits.

HIGH NOON

Hushed in green summer's brooding heat
Leaves hang listless. No bird calls.
In crevice and hole the crickets sleep.
Grasshoppers hide by the mossy walls.
Daisy, Queen Anne's lace, tangles of vetch
Vary the motionless waves of grasses.
Only the sun's wide shadow of clouds
Moves with high gliding cumulus masses . . .
Dark ships of flowering seas that pass
High over field and tree and boulder.
Quiet of summer noon is here,

"In Dispute"

The need for uniformity in scoring boxing matches was again forcefully emphasized in the recent Louis-Walcott decision, described by Grantland Rice as "the worst decision in 40 years," by Dick O'Brien as "the greatest miscarriage of justice in the history of the ring," by Shirley Povich of The Washington Post "the boldest robbery in heavyweight annals," with many similar denunciations from numerous other writers.

The most successful and generally used mode of scoring is the "10-point-must" system in which the winner of any one round is marked "10", with the loser scored from "1" to "9" in proportion. In that system a round that is barely won comes out "10" to "8" or "10" to "9", while a round punctuated by one or more knockdowns comes up "10" to "2" or "10" to "3." A knockdown is the closest thing to a knockout. A knockdown round can best be evened up if knockdowns are scored by both contestants. Under the "10-point-must" system the winner sometimes, but not often, is the fellow who did not win the greater number of rounds. When a round is even each contestant is marked "O." Most States use this system.

The fallacy of the "round system" in which the winner of a round is marked "X" and the loser "O" was demonstrated some years ago when Steve Hamas "won" from Art Lasky in New York. Among boxing men the antiquated "round system" is ofttimes described as one designed for fellows who cannot count. Use of this system is really asking for trouble and criticism, as a round barely won is scored on a parity with a round won by a mile.

Variants of the "10-point must" system show, in some localities a basic figure of "5" used instead of the "10." That leads into decimal points at times. The A. A. U. uses the same system but with a basic figure of "20" to the winner of a round.

Then there is the "split 10" system with rounds scored "8" to "2" and "6" to "4" etc. In all such systems the winner of the greater number of points need not be, but usually is, the winner of the greater number of rounds.

However, all States ought to score alike and each State ought to go along with a majority vote. One boxing follower sums it up with, "It ought to be like in baseball so a two bagger in Cleveland will not be a homerun in Washington."

That the Louis-Walcott decision has transcended sports circles and sports pages is indicated by an editorial "In Dispute", in The Washington Post of December 11 stressing the need for a uniform scoring system.

Naylor Gardens

In December 18 issue you printed a letter with respect to Naylor Gardens and the Veterans Cooperative Housing Association. The letter contains a repetition of factual misstatements similar to those which have originated from a small active group who are presently tenants of the Government in the project and who are opposed to the veterans acquiring ownership of their homes.

The Veterans Cooperative Housing Association has never notified the residents of Naylor Gardens of any request for a mass eviction contrary to the promises made by anybody. On the contrary, the contract with the Government, negotiations for which commenced in December 1945, provides specifically that the tenants who did not care to purchase their apartments might stay in residence until December 31, 1947 or until the end of rent control, now March 31 1948. There has been no proposal by VCHA that this clause be modified.

The contract with the Government, when executed in January, 1947, was based upon the then assumption that vacancies would occur at the rate of a minimum of 30 to 35 apartments per month out of the 750 total apartments. Every apartment voluntarily vacated has been immediately occupied by a bona fide paid member of VCHA who is a veteran of World War II and who has paid twice the required minimum deposit toward buying his apartment. Strong efforts have been made by the opponents of the purchase to prevent vacancies occurring.

It was because the number of vacancies was uncertain that the contract stipulated that only substantially 300 apartments should be occupied by the time when title was passed by the Government to VCHA.

Veterans Cooperative Housing Association now has in the project 179 members who are veterans and 11 non-veterans who took advantage of the opportunity provided by the veterans association for tenants who were not veterans to become members if they chose. It has a total membership as of this date of 395 who have deposited in escrow for payment to the Government more than $550,000. A substantial number of additional memberships are being processed.

The most interesting part of the letter you published is the last sentence: "We do not ask for any more than was agreed upon by VCHA a year ago." If that is the case, no tenant can object to turning over his apartment to the veteran who has paid for it by March 31, 1948.

Distillery Workers

It is a necessity of war that some citizens must leave preferred jobs and go into the armed forces or into other war work not of their own choosing. These citizens are, in a measure, compensated for their sacrifice from the common treasury and all of us assume some portion of the financial burden. The group called into direct service, therefore, does not feel it has been singled out to make the entire contribution.

Under the operation of this present "cold war" a condition has arisen which may well be a threat to all persons in an industry which, it is felt, should be curtailed "in the public interest." These citizens are called upon to sacrifice their jobs and means of livelihood with no compensation whatever or substitute means of support provided for them and their families. I refer to the workers in the brewing and distilling industries whose activities, no doubt, will continue to be under attack.

In spite of those holding prejudiced views, these are legal industries and employ good American citizens; many of these employes are returned veterans. The object of this shutdown is, understandably, to increase the stock of grain available for food at home and abroad. In doing this it seems some compensation should be made to those who, like the personnel of a "shooting war" are called on to give up their civilian means of livelihood. It is hardly just that this group of citizens he asked to assume the whole financial burden of a plan which is said to be "in the public interest."

It is true the above mentioned employes compose only a small segment of our society directly affected by this confiscation by Government of their means of support. However, this action raises one more specter of insecurity in the lives of those persons who depend on a paycheck to supply the major portion, if not all, of their needs.

"Church And School"

It seems to me that a pertinent consideration has been overlooked in this rather protracted discussion of "church and school," or if it has been mentioned I do not believe it has received the emphasis it deserves.

The consideration hinges on what constitutes the "free society" mentioned by Mr. MacIntyre in his letter of December 13, and, in other terms, so insisted upon by Mrs. Vashti McCollum and her lawyers.

To my mind the objectors to the program of voluntary religious education have adopted a position that would force us to sell out freedom in general to one or the other of two freedoms in particular. In other words, it is already a question not of freedom but of whose freedom.

Those who object to voluntary religious education in our public schools do so on the grounds that in one way or another it militates against the freedom of those who for various reasons do not wish to receive such instruction. The assertion is made that discrimination is invited by "being singled out at school by being the only boy in his room who does not take the course."

There may be some cause for such objections. At least we need to be on guard these days against penalizing any minority, or even marginal, group simply because it does not conform in every respect to the opinions, standards and beliefs of the majority. These objectors, as others, should be protected from abusive discrimination; and more, they should continue to be given the freedom to abstain, as long as they like, from any and all forms of religious instruction.

But it does not follow from this that a highly vocal and rather militant minority should be able to hamstring the wishes of the majority. If this small group should succeed in abolishing voluntary religious education from our schools, would not such be the case? This certainly would not secure a greater freedom for the majority, who see in religious education a thing of great value and who wish voluntarily to receive the advantages of the same. Nor would it secure a greater positive freedom for those who do not wish to receive such instruction, for they now have complete freedom of choice in the matter.

The only other freedom which could be given these objectors to voluntary religious education in our public schools is the negative freedom they are now asking for; namely, the freedom to keep themselves from the possibility of being influenced by any religious teaching which may be brought indirectly into their lives by associates who voluntarily enter into religious instruction in our public schools; and the means they wish to take to accomplish their aim is to deny the majority the privilege of receiving such instruction.

The consideration of this "church and school" issue which I want to see given a more adequate presentation in your pages is this: The withdrawal of the privilege now enjoyed by thousands of school children and high school students in the United States today of voluntarily taking advantage of religious instruction offered in our public schools will not give us greater freedom of religion. It will give us only regimentation against religion.

The Jacobean Genius

THE JAMES FAMILY: Including selections from the writings of Henry James, senior, William, Henry and Alice James; by F. O. Matthiessen. (Knopf, $6.75.)

THE NOTEBOOKS OF HENRY JAMES; edited by F. O. Matthiessen and Kenneth B. Murdock. (Oxford University Press, $6.)

In the preparation of these two volumes, Professor Matthiessen had access to many important documents hitherto unpublished, but included in the collection which was turned over to the Houghton Library at Harvard by the son of William James. The result is to enlarge and to deepen our interest in this fascinating American family, more gifted, I suspect, than the whole Adams dynasty and certainly more influential in matters of the mind. Two generations of the James family were endowed to an astonishing degree with those qualities of intellect and imagination that are comprehended in the word genius; they were also afflicted more greviously than most with the tendencies that we call nowadays neurotic. All five children of the elder Henry James seem to have suffered in some way from melancholia; two of them at least contemplated for a time the idea of suicide, and Alice James, the only daughter, was, among other things, an hysteric in the clinical meaning of the word and perhaps, as Mr. Matthiessen seems to hint, in the etymological sense as well.

This group-biography, then, to use the publisher's word for it, affords a fascinating study to those who may be tempted to analyze that close relationship between genius and madness, upon which so many observers, beginning with Aristotle, have commented. As far as the Jameses are concerned, both their genius and their morbidity, if such a word is justified, seem to have been the concomitants of a painfully heightened sensibility; that is to say, they felt things more acutely because they perceived them more intensely. They had been subjected since childhood to an incessant intellectual stimulation, and it is well known by all who have a weakness for them that ideas are in their way as toxic as alcohol. It would of course be quite untrue to say that any of the Jameses was really mad, in the sense in which we might apply such a word to Swift or to Blake or to Poe or to Paul Verlaine. There is no evidence here of erratic behavior by any member of the family, apart from a characteristic enthusiasm for certain causes; their excesses were psychical rather than bodily. Some, notably William and Alice James, possessed a good deal of humor, a quality relatively rare among madmen. All the same, most of them in one way or another seem to have been close enough to the frontier of sanity to have got a good glimpse of the haunted country which lies beyond.

◆◆◆

Perhaps the most interesting and original of this extraordinary family was the father. The elder Henry James was the son of a wealthy New York merchant of Ulster Presbyterian origin. An accident in childhood deprived him of his right leg, and in thus incapacitating him for the normal activities of adolescence, seems to have intensified the naturally introspective bent of his mind. Early in his maturity he experienced some sort of spiritual crisis, and appears to have found an answer to his religious questioning in the theosophical treatises of Emanuel Swedenborg. Although Professor Matthiessen quotes at some length from the elder James' religious writings and devotes some pages of commentary to them, it cannot be said that his religious ideas emerge very clearly, and there is some evidence that his own contemporaries were considerably perplexed by them. He made claim, however, to certain mystical experiences and like all mystics insisted that the liberation of the spirit and its union with God depend upon the annihilation of the self. He was obsessed, like Melville, with the problem of evil, and his solution, like Melville's, seems curiously Gnostic. Yet paradoxically, he shared in an extreme degree the lusty optimism of his age, and was in theory a passionate egalitarian, although he moved for the most part in the company of the well-to-do. He combined the religious teachings of Swedenborg with the economic doctrines of Charles Fourier into a kind of spiritualized socialism, which however he never attempted to practice. The considerable fortune he had inherited left him free to indulge his taste in travel and to pursue his spiritual and intellectual adventures. He was a voluminous writer and, for all his professed quietism and scorn of dogma, a passionate polemist.

The notebooks of the younger Henry James are of course of the greatest value to critics, literary historians, writers of fiction and to readers of his books. They extend intermittently from 1878 to 1911 and contain the seminal ideas and the preliminary planning of many of his better known novels and stories. The great interest lies in observing the gradually increasing obliquity of James' approach to his themes. In the earlier phase most of the stories, such for example as The Bostonians, appear to have been worked out pretty much as conceived. In the later phase, however, the stories go through such a series of modifications and refinements that the original idea is all but lost. And there are instances, such for example as in The Spoils of Poynton and in The Other House, in which the finished work appears considerably inferior in dramatic interest to the original scenario.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Marshall Comes Home

IN THE LAST four paragraphs of his address on Friday evening, Secretary Marshall set forth "the fundamental reason for the frustration we have encountered in our endeavor to reach a realistic agreement for a peace settlement." It is also the fundamental reason for the Marshall Plan.

Lippmann

"In the war," he said, "Europe was in a large measure shattered." And therefore, "a political vacuum was created." There was a vacuum in Germany: there is no German state, only a great mass of Germans. In every country of eastern Europe—with the exception of Czechoslovakia—there was a vacuum: the prewar governments and prewar regimes had collapsed and were discredited. In France there was a vacuum: the Third Republic had fallen and the Fourth Republic did not quickly or easily establish itself. In Italy there was a vacuum where for 20 years Mussolini and the Fascists had monopolized authority.

Thus at the end of the war, there was no great European power able to play a leading part in the settlement of Europe. But besides that, there was a partial vacuum in Great Britain which, in saving itself and the whole free world, had come so close to exhaustion that it has not been able to play its necessary part in the settlement.

In this vacuum the Soviet Union and the United States—neither of them a European power, both of them novices in the great affairs of the world—have been churning around.

"UNTIL THIS vacuum has been filled by the restoration of a healthy European community," said Mr. Marshall, "it does not appear possible that paper agreements can assure a lasting peace." That surely is the gospel truth. That is why it was the part of wisdom to adjourn in London, and to break off the argument that could only make an eventual settlement more difficult. For "agreements between sovereign states are generally the reflection and not the cause of genuine settlements."

The language here is perhaps a bit obscure but the idea within it is profound. Mr. Marshall was saying—as I understood him—that Russia and America cannot make a European settlement. Even if they could work out a formula, it would be only a "paper agreement." A real agreement can be had only when the leading European countries—in the first instance Great Britain, France, Italy, and Poland—are sufficiently restored to play their necessary and proper part.

A paper agreement between Moscow and Washington cannot restore Europe and settle the war. But when and as Europe is restored, a genuine agreement will be possible. For the agreement will then not be something imposed by Moscow and Washington on Europe. It will be, as Mr. Marshall put it, the "reflection" of a genuine settlement that has already taken place in Europe among the Europeans. That is why the European Recovery Program is essential to the making of peace. Only in a Europe, which is recovering from the war, can peace be made.

THE MATURITY and wisdom of this fundamental judgment on the crucial problem of our time affects his attitude towards Russia. Obviously he does not take the view that there is no deep conflict of interest and purpose between the Soviet Union and the western world. But neither does he take the view—so common today among the disappointed idealists—that a settlement is impossible as long as this conflict of interest and purpose exists.

His view, if I understood him correctly, is that which a strategist and diplomat who has read history could be expected to take—that deep conflicts of interest and purpose can be regulated but not abolished, that agreement among rival powers need not wait until they all want the same thing. Settlements can be had when they accept the fact that their power to get what they want is limited, is checked, and is balanced.

In this view a settlement with Russia does not depend upon a change of heart in Moscow, upon an abandonment of Russian imperialism and a renunciation of the Communist ideology. It depends upon the restoration of a balance of power which not the United States alone but the great nations of Europe as well are able to maintain. For what will matter in the end is not what the Politburo would like to do but what in fact it knows it cannot do.

OFTEN IN DESCRIBING public men we say of one that he is a Jeffersonian Democrat, of another that he is a Hamiltonian nationalist, of another that he reminds us of Lincoln. Of George Marshall it can be said that his virtues and his qualities remind us of George Washington.

His towering prestige rests upon an instinctive recognition among the people that he is a servant of his duty and not of his ambition, that his power of command and of leadership is natural, and needs no vulgar showmanship, that he loves his country and not himself, that he seeks the public good and not his own popularity and—remembering his record in the war—that like Washington he knows that "the nation which indulges towards another an habitual hatred or an habitual fondness is in some degree a slave. . . a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest."

Coordinators Urged to Ease Oil Shortages

By The Associated Press

Governors of 28 States yesterday were asked by Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) to consider appointment of local emergency fuel coordinators as one step toward overcoming fuel oil shortages in their areas.

The request was based on a report of an oil industry committee appointed by Tobey to recommend a voluntary plan to ease the short fuel oil supply.

Tobey airmailed a copy of the report to each of the 28 Governors together with a letter calling their attention specifically to the recommendation for an emergency coordinator and the "voluntary" features of the plan.

Urge State Coordinators

The industry group proposed that the coordinators be appointed in States where shortages develop, to handle problems of distribution, particularly between suppliers and distributors.

The coordinator would step in where distributors could not obtain sufficient fuel oil to meet their requirements from suppliers who had furnished them in the past, and in the cases of distributors who had no regular or "historical" suppliers prior to this year.

If the coordinator succeeded in getting oil from supplying companies for these distributors, he would then be required to see that the "emergency supplies" were parceled out equitably and "to the best advantage" by the distributors.

The industry recommended that cases of entirely new demand, such as veterans' housing projects, new homes, and others be handled by the coordinator in a similar manner.

Estimate 15% Deficit

The industry estimated there was a 15 per cent deficit in fuel oil supplies for New England and North Atlantic seaboard States, and a 10 per cent deficit in some other parts of the country. The committee also recommended that householders adopt strict conservation measures.

Tobey, chairman of a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee on coal and oil shortage, sent the report to the Governors of these States:

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Virginia, Tennessee, South Dakota, Oklahoma, North Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky, Kansas, Iowa, Maryland, Illinois, Delaware and Ohio.

The Industry Committee was headed by J. C. Richdale, jr., Boston, vice president of the Colonial Beacon Oil Co.

Yearly Plan For Defense Is Ordered

By The Associated Press

To keep the United States ahead in the weapons race, the Research and Development Board has been ordered by Secretary of Defense Forrestal to submit at least once a year a new master plan for military research.

The instructions appeared last night in a directive defining the duties and authority of the board, the membership of which was completed recently under the chairmanship of Dr. Vannevar Bush. On the board are two representatives, each the Army, Navy and Air Forces.

To gear the whole field of research with the strategic planning of the armed forces, The Joint Chiefs of Staff (the military heads of the armed forces, plus the chief of staff to the President) is instructed to provide general guidance for the board. In doing this, the directive said, the joint chiefs must "determine the relative importance of achieving military effectiveness of various possible weapon systems under envisaged combat conditions" and give the research board their opinions.

The munitions board, co-equal with the joint chiefs and research board in the national military establishment, is instructed to keep the board posted on the types and availability of critical materials and substitutes needed in the scientific search for new weapons.

The board, the directive stated, will have "authority to resolve differences among the several departments and agencies of the military establishment." This appeared to be a move to settle disputes such as have arisen in the past over research programs.

Dimensions Of ERP

By Ernest Lindley

Some Estimates Of The Need

THE STATE DEPARTMENT, like the Harriman Committee, has revised the Paris estimates of the aid needed by Europe. Its recommendation that 6.8 billion dollars in aid from the United States Government be authorized for the first fifteen months is a little lower, on a monthly basis, than the Harriman Committee's recommendation of 5.75 billion dollars for the first twelve months. The State Department figure excludes, however, more than eight hundred million dollars for preventing "disease and unrest" in Germany. It proposes that this part of the program be financed until July 1, 1949, as in the past, through a separate appropriation to the War Department. It includes in ERP money for Germany for reconstruction purposes beyond the mere prevention of "disease and unrest."

The specific cuts made by the State Department parallel most of those recommended by the Harriman Committee. Some are made on the ground that the commodities simply are not available in the amounts desired. Some are made on the ground that Europe could not use advantageously as much of certain goods as was estimated at Paris. (Example: certain types of farm machinery.) Some are made on the ground that European plans for new productive facilities are too ambitious.

THE OVER-ALL State Department estimates of western Europe's prospective trade deficits with the Western Hemisphere—if western Europe is to become self-supporting—were somewhat higher than the Harriman Committee's both for the first year and for the full period of ERP. But, like the Harriman Committee, it recommends that part of this deficit be covered by financial aid from other western Europe nations, part by loans from the World Bank, and part by private investors. Admittedly, all estimates beyond the 15-month period are highly tentative. And even the 6.8 billion dollars asked for that period may be either above or below the actual need.

The State Department analysis bears all the evidence of close, skeptical, scrutiny of the Paris program. The attempt was to come up with the minimum consistent with the purpose of ERP, which is to put western Europe on a sound basis so that it can earn its living without need for further abnormal assistance.

The first year of ERP is expected to be the most expensive. After that aid from the United States is expected to taper off. Yet even during the first year, the State Department estimates the excess of United States exports over imports will run at a lower rate than during the second quarter of 1947.

ERP will take less than three per cent of our gross national product. It is projected to cost less in four years than we spent on the war in three months. To say that a program of this size would "wreck" the American economy is obviously complete nonsense.

ERP will aggravate and prolong the shortages of a few key commodities. But this need not be a serious matter, if steps are taken to see that the supplies of these commodities which remain at home are not wasted and are channelled into their more essential uses.

SENATOR TAFT already has announced his opposition to any program approaching the dimensions recommended, as essential, by the Harriman Committee and the State Department. Although many of his Republican colleagues are more cautious, they are known to share his viewpoint. Senator White of Maine, however, has voiced quietly the prediction that in the end aid will be approved in substantially the amount asked by the President. Judging from past experience, at least one fourth of the Republicans in the two Houses will vote for aid on approximately the scale proposed. On a question of such importance to the security of the United States and the peace of the world, they are likely to be unmoved by the isolationists and economy-first advocates of their party. The latter will have some scattered support from the Democratic side. But when the votes are finally tabulated, Senator White's forecast probably will be sustained.

Hero Who Rescued Woman From Sea In Ala. Hospital

Mobile, Ala., Dec. 21 (AP).—Ralph J. Keller, 29, who dived into the icy North Atlantic to rescue a woman passenger of the Bermuda Sky Queen, is in Mobile's Marine Hospital with respiratory infection.

Keller said he had suffered pains in "practically all my muscles" since he plunged into the sea from the Coast Guard Cutter Bibb to help a woman who had been washed from a rescue boat.

He collapsed at his home at Fairhope, Ala., Friday while talking with his widowed mother.

Sixty-nine persons were rescued from the transatlantic plane 10 weeks ago by crewmen of the Bibb. Keller was singled out as "the outstanding hero," and was awarded the gold Life-Saving Medal—highest decoration of the Coast Guard.

3707 Russian Officials Active In U. S., Sen. Tydings Asserts

By the United Press

Justice Department records show that 3707 Russian government officials are in the United States on various missions, Senator Tydings (D., Md.), revealed yesterday.

Figures compiled by the immigration and naturalization service early this month also show that 131 Soviet citizens are visiting this country "for business reasons" and another 219 Russians are here as members of international organizations, such as the United Nations, Tydings said in a broadcast from Baltimore.

The Democratic Senator said immigration officials estimate that, as of today, there are 206,000 alien residents of Russian nationality living in the United States. But he emphasized that "a large number of these came here many, many years ago . . . and would probably disclaim Soviet nationality." Some, he said, were refugees who fled Russia after the Bolshevik revolution put the Communists in power.

Would Outlaw Party

Turning from Russian visitors to domestic Communists, Tydings said "practically every member of Congress" would like to outlaw the Communist Party in this country, if a way could be found to do it "effectually." But he said "people who have thought a lot about this question . . . feel that drastic action against the Communists will only serve the purpose of communism" by driving the party underground, where it could not be watched.

The Republican open forums, a Nation-wide organization of community discussion groups sponsored by presidential aspirant, Harold E. Stassen, reported meanwhile that 34 per cent of their members are in favor of passing a law to forbid membership in the Communist Party. A much larger group, 83 per cent, believe that education about the nature of communism is the best way to combat American Communists, forum officials said.

GOP National Chairman Carroll Reece issued a statement urging the Communists to continue their denunciations of the Republican party.

Criticism Welcomed

Reece said in a letter to officials of the New York State Communist Party that he considered it "very advantageous to the Republican Party to have the open and active opposition of a world-wide criminal conspiracy which seeks the destruction of the Government of the United States and of liberal governments everywhere."

Reece said his letter was in reply to a letter from Robert Thompson, chairman of the New York Communist Party, denouncing the Republicans and urging strong anti-inflation measures.

The Communist proposals for price controls and rationing were "remarkably similar" to President Truman's ideas, Reece remarked. But he said he agreed with one phase of the Communist program—lower taxes for working people.

Tydings commented that people "who have not thought very much about it" are apt to have strong ideas on what to do about the Communists.

U. S. Life-Saving Business Is 110 Years Old

The United States Government went into the life-saving business 110 years ago today.

Authorized by Congress to "cruise upon the coast in the severe portion of the season . . . to afford aid to distressed navigators" the Revenue Marine, great-grandfather of the Coast Guard, was born.

Now, with its rescue network expanded to 300 ships, planes, coast life-saving stations and 200 small craft, the Coast Guard is saving an estimated 6000 lives a year.

Created just as American shipping was gaining a place in the world's maritime service, the Coast Guard has been credited with boosting shipping during early tribulations.

In 1831 President Jackson's Secretary of the Treasury ordered the Gallatin to sea out of Wilmington "without delay." "In the present inclement season," he explained, "it is thought proper to combine with the ordinary duties of the cutters that of assisting vessels found on the coast in distress and of ministering to the wants of their crews."

Congress legalized Secretary McLane's order six years later.

The Coast Guard reached its peak of efficiency during the last war. Coast Guard coxswains were at the helm of landing boats in virtually every amphibious operation from Europe to the Pacific.

2 Weeks on Feet, Italian Claims Dance Record

Rome, Dec. 21 (NYHT).—After shuffling around for two weeks and wearing out six partners, a young Italian marathon dancer named Giuseppe di Aversa lay down for a long rest this morning. He had been on his feet for 350 hours with only four 10-minute breaks a day—a feat which he claims shatters all existing marathon dancing records.

The dancer's current partner will not give her name because her parents think she is off on a skiing trip.

One paper described Di Aversa as a "creature of God who neither rests nor sleeps nor breathes fresh air, but who jumps and turns and wiggles around to the sound of ceaseless music."

"He must surely be injuring his intestines," another paper said.

'Red Belt' Held Forming Bloc in Europe

By Arthur Gavshon

London, Dec. 21 (AP).—The "Red Belt" states of Europe are moving into a fairly solid bloc to contend for Communist domination of the continent. Under Russian direction the states of eastern Europe seem bent on standardizing their programs to resist western bids for leadership.

These conclusions can be drawn tonight from interviews with men in both the eastern and western "worlds"—Foreign Ministers, Ambassadors and officials who help to shape the foreign policies of a half dozen countries.

These men see as "near certainties" early in 1948:

Eastern and western states will revamp their foreign policies in the light of the situation in Germany, where a state of informal partition now exists. This may lead to a series of new regional defense alliances, not only to guard against new aggression by Germany but also to provide for mutual aid against any aggression.

To Cement Political Links

Red Belt states of the Balkans will intensify the process they have already started of cementing their political and economic links with the countries of the Danube Basin.

With federal union of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Albania, Romania and Hungary as a possible long-term objective, the sources said, all these states immediately will aim at writing mutual aid pacts, interlocking treaties of friendship, progressive elimination of trade and tariff barriers, and coordination of their respective national economic recovery plans.

In this connection, one European foreign minister said: "Tightened political and economic ties between these Communist-led countries will unite 80 million to 90 million people and in effect will mean that a new great power has arisen in Europe."

A clearcut eastern European recovery program, under Russian leadership, is likely. Its objective will be to outstrip the Marshall Plan and so to gain the political whiphand over Europe.

Sequel to Split

A sequel to the split in the Conference of Foreign Ministers is likely to be a political battle for Berlin. British sources say formation of a West German government may be followed by creation of a Russian-sponsored "central German administration," based in Berlin. There would be greater "spiritual appeal" to the German people in such a body than its rival in Frankfurt could offer, they said.

Another "battleground" for eastern and western political policies is Greece. There the next slated move seems to be the creation of a "free Greek government" under Communist leadership.

The British Labor Party, following similar action by the French and Italian governments, has touched off a political offensive against the influence of Communists in this country.

To Forestall Reds

British Paper Asks Speed on Europe Unity

London, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—The Sunday newspaper The Observer suggested today that the 16 European Marshall-Plan nations, augmented by German representatives, meet immediately to unify western Europe economically and militarily.

The Observer said western Europe must "coordinate and integrate" its defenses because Cominform nations might resort to "military aggression" to wreck the Plan.

The Observer said such a conference would face the tasks of reaching agreement on money required; establishing a coordinating committee to advise and report on the use of American aid, and to explore the integration of European economy; and integrating defense.

Guatemala to Pay American for Airline

Guatemala, Guatemala, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Official Gazette said today the government would pay $936,181 to Alfred Denby, United States citizen living in New Orleans, in settlement of a claim arising from expropriation of Denby's airline after a 1944 revolution.

Chinese Diplomats' Daughter Is Married to Gen. Chennault

Shanghai, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, retired wartime commander of the Flying Tigers, today married Anna Chan, daughter of the former Chinese consul general in San Francisco, the Central News Agency reported.

The wedding took place at Hollyhead, the 57-year-old general's home in suburban Hungjao, Central News said. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Dr. Y. W. Chan, recently appointed consul for Kuching, Sarawak.

Col. Thomas Gentry, an old Army friend of Chennault's, was best man, and Cynthia Chan of Canton, the bride's elder sister, was the maid of honor.

The Rev. Ralph Mortenson of the China Bible House performed the ceremony.

The bride's stepmother, who recently arrived from San Francisco, Chinese Vice Foreign Minister George Yeh and United States Vice Consul Arthur Rosen were among the guests.

Chennault, now chief of air transport for the China National Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, first came to China in 1937 as air adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

He organized the American volunteer group—famed as the Flying Tigers—in 1941 to fight the Japanese invaders. The volunteers scored spectacular successes against the Japs in China and Burma, and Chennault became famous overnight.

Later, the A. V. G. became a nucleus for the 14th United States Air Force in China. Chennault was recalled from retirement and placed in command of the newly organized air force with the rank of major general.

He holds the rank of brigadier general in the Chinese army.

Chennault was divorced early this year by his first wife, the former Nell Thompson of Monroe, La., whom he married December 24, 1911. He has six sons and two daughters by his first marriage.

Stalin Wins Soviet Seat—Unanimously

(Compiled from Wire Dispatches)

The Moscow radio reported yesterday that Prime Minister Stalin was unanimously elected deputy to the Moscow Soviet. Yesterday was Stalin's 68th birthday.

Reporting on results of balloting in five Russian republics the radio said "the whole procedure of voting in the 58th electoral area in the Stalin district of Moscow took only five hours and by 11 a. m. 100 per cent of the voters had voted for Josef Stalin."

Citizens also went to the polls in the republics of Russia, the Ukraine, Armenia, Moldavia and Karelo-Finland to elect deputies to the Soviets of districts, towns and villages. The other 11 republics will elect local representatives in January and February.

Voting Described

Commenting on the voting in Moscow, the broadcast said:

"The big house where polling station number 24 is located and where Generalissimo Stalin's name is on the ballot papers was brightly illuminated. Hundreds of engineers coming off the night-shift gathered at the entrance to the polling station before the doors were opened.

"Veteran worker Sergei Saznov, of the tool shop, was the first to vote. It was here in Moscow that he spent his youth, here he became a worker and won renown in the tool shop.

"The next to vote was 70-year-old pensioner Olga Borodkina.

"'Many things have happened before my eyes in this town,' she said. 'The brightest of all are election days.'

"After voting, many people stay around the polling stations discussing the latest developments abroad and at home," the broadcast said.

The official Russian news agency Tass said that in the district where Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov is candidate for the city Soviet, voters in "holiday spirits" vied for the honor of being the first to cast a ballot for him. The winnner, Tass said, was Nikilai Bolotov, an Army veteran and student who was quoted as saying:

"In voting for Vyacheslav Mikhailovich Molotov we vote for the Soviet Union's foreign policy which is directed towards promoting the cause of peace and against the inciters of another war.

"We, the Soviet people, have good and strong nerves and nobody can intimidate us. We all know that the Soviet Union's policy enjoys the support and approval of millions of common men and women the world over."

Missouri Basin Project Costs Soon to Increase

By The Associated Press

Reclamation Commissioner Michael W. Straus said on the third anniversary of the Missouri River Basin project yesterday in soon will take some two million dollars a year to maintain the project's current construction rate. That is almost nine times the appropriation for this year.

Straus said opening of bids tomorrow Indianola, Neb., for construction of Medicine Creek Dam—sixth major dam in the system—"symbolizes the acceleration in reclamation development which has taken place since Congress reaffirmed in July its desire for speedy results in this basin."

135 Millions Proposed for Start on College Student Aid

freshman class of 50, while there were nearly 1000 applicants in the fall of 1947.

Similar limitations, said the commission, have brought serious national shortages of Negro professional personnel, with the shortage of doctors "a near catastrophe for the health of the Negro population."

Four dissents to the commission's stand on segregation, noted in the first report, were detailed yesterday.

Those dissenting were Arthur H. Compton, chancellor of Washington University, St. Louis; Douglas S. Freeman, editor of the Richmond, Va., News Leader; Lewis W. Jones, president of the University of Arkansas, and Goodrich White, president of Emory University, Georgia.

They declared:

"We recognize that many conditions affect adversely the lives of our Negro citizens, and that gross inequality of opportunity, economic and educational, is a fact.

"We are greatly concerned that as rapidly as possible conditions should be improved, inequalities removed, and greater opportunity provided for all our people. But we believe that efforts toward these ends must, in the South, be made within the established patterns of solical relationships. . .

See Threat of Tragedy

"We believe that pronouncements such as those of the commission . . . impede progress, and threaten tragedy to the people of the South, both white and Negro. . . .

"But a doctrinaire postion which ignores the facts of history and the realities of the present is not one that will contribute constructively to the solution of difficult problems of human relationships."

In drafting its program for Federal financial aid to education, the commission declared that the number of students attending colleges prior to World War II represented less than one third of those who demonstrably can profit from higher education.

The commission stated that individual need, plus ability, character, sense of responsibility and other factors would determine who should receive Federal aid.

Comparing its proposal to the GI Bill of Rights, the commission said:

"It seems obvious that, in the national interest, we as a Nation can well afford to invest in the education of needy nonveterans amounts approaching those which we are now investing in the education and training of qualified veterans."

More Than Billion a Year

The present GI Bill, said the report, is costing the Government over a billion dollars a year in tuition and subsistence grants.

There are also other precedents for Federal aid, said the report, such as the former National Youth Administration program, and currently, grants by the United States Public Health Service and financial aid to education aid furnished through Reserve Officers Training Corps programs.

Legislation for a National Science Foundation also includes scholarship and fellowship aids.

Its general Federal aid program, said the commission, will make "specialized and piecemeal programs unnecessary and unwise," and a general administration of all such programs was urged.

The scholarship aid proposal would have a maximum grant of $800 for an academic year. The program would cover 20 per cent of all non-veterans, and should be increased each year as GI Bill authorizations diminish, the report stated.

Commission in Each State

Each applicant would select his or her college and university, with admission in a normal way. Funds would be administered through a scholarship commission in each State.

Grants would be available for two or four-year colleges, both public and private, and for graduate study, including professional schools, up to three years.

Students would be generally limited to seven annual aid grants, with renewal dependent upon satisfactory completion of year-to-year work.

Basis for Distribution

Amount of funds distributed to each State would depend on its number of high school students and proportion of 18 to 21-year olds as compared with the Nation.

Recipients of the $1500 yearly Federal fellowships for graduate study would be selected in national competition, with the fellowships renewable up to three years, providing certain standards are met.

A dissent to State disbursement of the scholarship funds was noted by Commission Member Milton S. Eisenhower, president of Kansas State College, who said:

"I believe that Federal scholarships should be prorated among colleges and universities and administered by them on the basis of individual student need and ability."

In support of Federal aid, the commission declared:

While there has been a gradual and consistent increase in the percentage of young people attending college, at no time have more than 16 per cent of youths 18 to 21 attended colleges and universities.

Throughout the country, the educators said, only about half as many rural youths attend college as those from urban communities.

Due to Low Income

"It must always be remembered that at least as many young people who have the same or greater intellectual ability than those now in college do not enroll because of low family income . . . the money incomes of more than one half of American families in 1946 were at or below $2600 a year."

Added to this fact, said the report, is that in 1945 nearly 75 per cent of all the Nation's children were living in families with incomes less than $3500 a year.

The South, in 1945, said the commission, had 37.1 of the Nation's children aged 5 to 17 years, but only 22.6 of the Nation's total income payments.

Other factors restricting higher education, said the commission, include increase of college fees to 30 per cent over 1938-39; physical distances of colleges from many communities, increased room and board costs, and the need for low-income families to depend on income of college-age youth.

Average New York Student

The commission estimated the average student in New York State in 1947 required $1500 for tuition and other fees, board, room, recreation, books, supplies and laundry — without including clothing and transportation.

To end discrimination against Negroes, Jewish students and others, the commission urged a change in admission policies of colleges and general adoption of legislation along the lines of that proposed in New York to make discrimination illegal. In addition, it said all Federal legislation for education aid should state that there will be no discrimination in the use of such funds.

In higher education, the report stated, only 1.2 per cent of Negroes completed a four-year college course, compared to 5.4 per cent of native whites and 2.4 per cent of foreign-born whites.

Religious discrimination, the report stated, which bars Jewish students from equal opportunity with non-Jewish students in the choice of institutions and in certain fields of advanced study, "has been aggravated in recent years."

9 Per Cent of Total

Jewish students, in 1946, represented 9 per cent of the total enrollment in the Nation's colleges and universities, according to one study.

"The fact that the Jewish proportion of the college population is greater than the Jewish proportion of the total population of the country," said the commission, "is largely explained by the fact that the Jews in the United States are an urban people, and proportionately more than twice as many urban whites go to college as rural whites."

The report said a study by B'nai B'rith, national Jewish organization, showed that between 1935 and 1946 out of 77 of 160 law schools, the proportion of Jewish students dropped from 25.8 to 11.1 per cent.

In 57 of 79 medical schools for that period, the drop was from 16.1 to 13.3 per cent; in 28 of 40 dental schools, Jewish students decreased from 28.5 to 19.7 per cent, while the proportion in osteopathy rose from 9.1 to 20.3, as many Jewish students unable to enter medical school turned to osteopathy.

Gains Made by Women

Discrimination against women, the commission held, has generally disappeared, "except at the professional school level, but even in this field women have made great gains. In 1946-47 there were 2093 women medical students or 10 per cent of the total students enrolled," the highest record so far.

In the field of adult education, an "eloquent testimonial" to the need for its expansion, said the report, is that in 1947 only 53 per cent of the voters had completed more than an eighth-grade education.

Because of increased life expectancy, the United States population "is becoming increasingly an adult one," which makes adult education a major national concern, the commission said.

One recommended means of raising the level of adult education is through the proposed system of community colleges. Another is through use of resident extension centers of colleges and universities in key locations off the campus.

In addition, the commission said, radio and motion pictures, if properly applied, hold the power to educate vast numbers of the adult population to a level where they will "become literate and competent in matters political, economic and cultural."

300 Indonesians Killed, Is Claim

Batavia, Java, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Indonesian Republic's ministry of information charged tonight that more than 300 Indonesian civilians had been killed and 200 wounded in Dutch "mopping up" operations in the Krawang area, 28 miles east of Batavia.

Meanwhile, it was announced that a third conference to form a temporary government for the new state of West Java would be held probably during the latter part of February.

Wealthy Sicilian Kidnaped by 'Robin Hood' Gang

Palermo, Italy, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—The elusive "Robin Hood" bandit, Salvatore Giuliano, led a band of 10 men tonight in kidnaping 27-year-old Luigi Magrini, member of one of Sicily's wealthiest families.

The band entered a restaurant in a small town outside Palermo where Giuliano demanded identity cards from all workers and patrons, while his men trained machineguns on the crowd.

When he saw Magrini's card, he ordered Magrini and his wife into an automobile.

The bandits freed Signora Magrini on the outskirts of town and told her to inform her husband's family that they would have to pay a ransom if his life was to be saved.

Vegetable Oil Study Slated

A small technical mission will be sent to Venezuela next month to investigate that country's vegetable oil resources, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations said yesterday.

Slated to leave January 5, the mission will comprise three agricultural scientists who will study the possibility of exploiting industrially oil-bearing plants which grow wild in Venezuela. It also will investigate equipment and methods used in present vegetable oil factories there.

Chairman of the mission will be Dr. K. S. Markley, head of the oil, fat and protein division of the southern regional laboratory of the Agriculture Department. Other members are Dr. Dale W. Jenkins, an Army botanist, and Dr. C. E. Claassen, a University of Nebraska agronomist.

The mission was appointed by Sir John Boyd, FAO director-general, at the request of the Venezuelan Development Corporation, representing the Venezuelan government.

Arlington and Alexandria Delegates Oppose Sales Tax

Contending a sales tax is unnecessary in Virginia, Arlington and Alexandria members of the Virginia General Assembly are leading a State-wide fight against such a tax.

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington, who heads the Anti-Sales Tax Committee, said Arlington and Alexandria members of the Legislature were united in their opposition. He added that they plan to suggest increasing the rates of the 31 tax sources now producing revenue for the State, and possibly new sources.

Magruder said he had not read the Moses School Study Commission report, which advocates a sales tax, but that he agreed new sources of revenue must be found. But not a sales tax, he emphasized.

Delegate George Damm, also of Arlington, said trade might be driven from the county into the District if a sales tax were imposed.

Fairfax delegates are understood to be more or less on the fence. Representing a large rural population, which would not be so directly affected as would urban dwellers, they are not ready to announce a stand as yet, it was said.

The Moses commission advocated a general sales tax not to exceed 2 per cent and also urged that income taxes of individuals and corporations be increased to provide funds for improving the State school system.

Approximately 23 million dollars would be raised annually by a 2 per cent sales tax, the commission said, while the other tax sources suggested would provide nearly 17 million dollars.

Woman Burned in Fire From Overheated Stove

Mrs. Luella Burns, 41, of 66 Defrees st. nw., suffered second-degree burns of the arms and back and first-degree burns of the face at 8 a. m., yesterday, in a blaze in her bedroom. Police said the fire started from an overheated stove in the room she shared with her commonlaw husband, Eddie Thornton, 45. Property damage was negligible, firemen reported.

Half Billion Asked for Cattle

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—A Texas rancher proposed today the United States spend a half-billion dollars to replace Mexican livestock infected with hoof and mouth disease.

The suggestion, by Robert Kleberg, operator of the famous King Ranch, was put forward at a meeting of 200 Mexican and United States cattle growers.

Oscar Flores, sub-Secretary of Agriculture for Mexica, said his countrymen would never consent to such a plan.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BASEBALL COMMISSIONER A. B. Chandler may be squinting very uneasily at the action of the New York Yankees football team in drafting Pete Layden, former University of Texas halfback.

POVICH

At first mention, it sounds like none of Chandler's business—what goes on in professional football. But there are complications that could compel the baseball commissioner to take a hand in this particular football deal.

If Layden signs a contract to play football with the New York team, then paradoxically it becomes the business of the baseball commissioner. The baseball and football Yankees are the same firm after their recent merger and in baseball the Yankees are in the same league with the St. Louis Browns.

That could be the rub, because in baseball Layden is the property of the Browns, listed as an outfielder. They acquired him three weeks ago off a Red Sox farm club, in the deal that sent Shortstop Vernon Stephens to Boston.

THUS, AS CHANDLER doubtless will view it, Layden is technically the property of two baseball clubs in the same league and in baseball that is cause enough for the righteous folks to swoon. The baseball rules are clearly defined and guard against such a horrendous state of affairs.

The baseball rules forbidding any such co-ownership of a ballplayer by two clubs in the same league are a precaution against any hint of collusion. They're aimed, for example, at preventing any such possibility as could happen if the rule were not in effect. Let's draw the picture a little bit finer:

Suppose the Yankees are coming down to the last day of the pennant race, needing one victory to clinch it. Suppose the Browns are their last-day opponent. Suppose the winning run scores when Left Fielder Layden, property of the Yankee firm, who is playing for the Browns that day, drops a fly ball. It could be the most honest kind of error—but that wouldn't stifle the talk . . .

IN PAST YEARS, the late Judge Landis when he was commissioner cracked down heavily on big league clubs who owned a farm team in a minor league and had title to an individual player on another club in the same league. Landis didn't need any evidence of collusion to fine the parent club and declare the player a free agent. He simply viewed it as an unhealthy situation and stamped out the practice.

Chandler dislikes to be reminded of the heavy-handed practices of Landis, and he has reiterated in something of a pet that "Judge Landis can't rule baseball from the grave." But Chandler doesn't quarrel with any of the Landis measures taken for the good of the game, and he's eager to demonstrate that he, too, will not temporize with any situation that might cast suspicion on the honesty of baseball.

A case like Layden's involving football and baseball ownership of the same athlete by the same club, hasn't come up before because not until last year did a baseball and football team merge ownership as did the Yankees. Thus any action Chandler may take might be historic; or at least precedent-setting.

BY THIS TIME it's pretty well established that Chandler, like Landis, can be tough. When he set down Leo Durocher for a year, with an arbitrary decision that Durocher's conduct was not the type expected of a major league figure, he out-toughed anything in Landis' record with the exception of Landis' action in declaring 99 Detroit players free agents.

Chandler's action against Durocher elevated him to new stature not only among baseball fans, but among the big league club-owners who after 25 years of Landis had visualized a commissioner who could be bent more easily to their will. Landis never had a more submissive set of club owners than the group over which Chandler presided at last week's major league meetings in New York.

It is significant that even at the end of Durocher's enforced idleness, President Branch Rickey of the Dodgers didn't make any announcement of the re-engagement of Durocher until two months later. And then before he acted to reinstate Durocher, he cautiously "cleared it" with Chandler.

Sure'n Dixie's A Broth of a Lad

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Thirteen months visiting in Dublin can give a little boy from Brooklyn a brogue but the distance only makes his heart grow fonder of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Johnny Koyles, 10, who arrived in the Marine Falcon today with his sister, Kathleen, 9, returning from a 13-month visit with an aunt and uncle, rushed up to newsmen to ask breathlessly, "is it true" that the Dodgers have traded Dixie Walker to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The sad news affirmed, Johnny declared, "shure, and I'm thinking Lippy (Leo Durocher) is going batty."

Yugoslavs Move To Make Rooting Sections Illegal

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Yugoslav sports authorities were determined today to eradicate from footbal lsuch "reactionary enemy" practices as disorderly shouting and whistling by spectators because they "provoke hatred and stir the passions."

Addressing the fifth Congress of the Yugoslav Cports Council, Miroslav Kreacic, the council's secretary-general, said, "Tendencies are spreading with great rapidity of late in some sports circles to copy certain damaging occurrences of sporting life in capitalist countries.

"Small groups fo reactionaries and enemies of true sport included among true admirers of sport try to create an atmosphere which has nothing in common with sport by various slogans, shouts and whistlings. Their aim, it is quite evident, is to make disorders to provoke hatred and to stir the passions."

Bears, Renaissance Clash on Friday

Lions Lose To Reds, 7-3

Providence, R. I., Dec. 21 (AP).—Striking for four goals in the final period, the Rhode Island Reds defeated the Washington Lions, 7 to 3, in their American Hockey league clash tonight before a 6278 crowd.

With the score tied at 3-all at the end of the second period, the Reds broke the game wide open by harvesting three goals in less than eight minutes of the finale.

Pete Kapusta highlighted that blistering drive by scoring twice in 27 seconds on breakaways. Chuck Scherza, who also scored twice, broke the tie at 3:11, and after Kapusta delivired his double punch, Johnny Chad completed the scoring.

Caps, Bombers In Return Game

Washington's Capitols, whose winning streak was halted at four games at a row by the St. Louis Bombers here last Saturday night, 55-52, came back against the Bombers in St. Louis Thursday night in an important Basketball Association of America game.

On Saturday night they return to Uline Arena against Joe Fulks and the Philadelphia Warriors at 8:30 o'clock.

"Bring on the Cards"

Neale Says Thompson's Strategy Won

Pittsburgh, Dec. 21 (AP).—"Champs at last," "Bring on those Cardinals."

Those two phrases echoed and reechoed through the Philadelphia Eagles dressing room today as the new Eastern Division champions of the National Football League came thundering in after conquering the Pittsburgh Steelers, 21-0.

"Want to know where the game was won," said Capt. Al Wistert, who came out of the game with a slight charleyhorse.

"It was won yesterday in Philadelphia, where every man gave a short speech, telling how he though the game could be won. We knew right then that we wouldn't be beaten."

Neale declined to single out any outstanding players but added:

"That Tommy Thompson played a great game. His signal calling was just about perfect." Tommy tossed touchdown passes to Steve Van Buren and Jack Ferrante.

Kish Throws Key Block

"Honest" John Kellison, line coach, likewise refused to point out any stars in the forward wall that never let the Steelers get closer than the nine-yard line.

Bosh Pritchard, whose 79-yard touchdown gallop in the third quarter completed the scoring, didn't even know how long his run was he did know that Ben Kish threw the key block that let him evade a half-dozen Steelers and break into the clear as he passed the Steelers bench.

Somebody asked Wistert if he was in the play.

"I should say not," re replied. "Sears (Vic) and I were over on the other side of the field watching in wonderment."

As the players trooped into the showers, Alexis Thompson, youthful owner of the Eagles, came in to congratulate the victors. Somebody also congratulated Alexis but got the reply:

"The honors go to Greasy there. He did a great job."

Over in the Steelers quarters, Dr. Jock Sutherland's boys went about their dressing without saying much.

"We were just beaten by a better team today," said Sutherland. "Their line play was superb and Thompson gave a great job of running the team."

Vote On Split This Week

The Eagles left for Philadelphia tonight, where they will complete their training before going to Chicago for the title game with the Chicago Cardinals next Sunday.

There also is the little matter of voting on the split of next Sunday's game.

"That'll probably come some day early in the week," said Wistert.

Denver Noses Irish, 61 to 60

Denver, Dec. 21 (AP).—Roy "Bat" Nelson, a substitute guard who had fired a dozen times at the Notre Dame basket without connecting, finally nailed a long one with 15 seconds to play last night to give Denver University a 61-60 victory over the Irish.

In a thrilling, see-saw game before 6200 fans, Forward Jack Hauser had sunk two free throws and then hit a drive-in shot to deadlock the score at 59-all with less than a half minute to go.

As Notre Dame pounded back toward the Denver goal, Kevin O'Shea was fouled and dropped in his free throw to give the Irish a 60-59 advantage and it looked as though it was all over.

But Nelson, who had replaced Denver's ace guard, Leonard Alterman, took a long pass down the floor and split the nets with a shot from the side court that gave the Rocky Mountain team its victory over the favored Irish.

As the final seconds ticked away, Notre Dame missed a flurry of close-up shots under the Denver basket.

Montgomery Faces Angelo in Tune-Up

Boston, Dec. 21 (AP).—Bob Montgomery of Philadelphia, will warm up for his lightweight title bout with Champion Ike Williams, in New York on February 20, by taking on hard-punching Joey Angelo of Providence, R. I., in a feature 10-round boxing bout tomorrow night at the Boston Garden.

Jersey Joe Walcott will add another $1000 to his now healthy bankroll by refereeing a six-round bout between Light Heavyweights Ralph Regan of Medford and Coolidge Miller of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Kansas' All-America Evans Up Against Tough Tech Line

Georgia Boys Are In Best Trim of Season for Game

By William Tucker

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—One of the toughest and smartest rush lines seen in the South in many years and a backfield featuring two frenetic freshmen, Bob McCoy and Red Patton, will carry Georgia Tech's banner into the Orange Bowl against the Kansas Jayhawks.

In fact, the Atlanta engineers hope to play their best game of the campaign on New Year's Day because for the first time since the Tulane contest, their second of the season, they will operate at close to full strength.

Tech murdered Tennessee and Tulane to get off to a fast start but injuries started cropping up and after three breather games the Engineers never got back in full stride during a really rugged November grind.

Beaten Only by Alabama

Only one opponent, resurgent Alabama, outscored them, however, and the Techs finished their season with nine victories against one defeat, the best record for the Atlanta Engineers since Stumpy Thomason and Warner Mizzell led them to the Rose Bowl in 1928.

Costly injuries suffered by backfield mainstays Dinky Bowen, George Mathews and Frank Ziegler gave Freshmen McCoy and Patton their chance and both will be very much in the ball game at

Jayhawker Ray Is Rated Best Passer in Midlands

By Bill Chapman

Lawrence, Kan., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Kansas' unbeaten and twice-tied Jayhawkers, who only two years ago were the whipping boys of the Big Six, hoped today to climax their rags-to-riches rise with a victory in their first Bowl venture against Georgia Tech in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

A few days ago the Jayhawks were as far from a major bowl bid as they were from the moon. This year they're one of the Nation's top-ranking teams, thanks to three men who combined their varied talents to lift Kansas out of the gridiron doldrums.

SEASON'S RECORD
KANSAS

The first was Ernie Quigley, who took over the job as athletic director and revived the school's waning football fortunes. The second was George Sauer, whom Quigley enticed from New Hampshire to coach. And the third was Ray Evans, one of the greatest backs ever to play for Kansas.

Evans Brings in Material

Evans came back from the service for the 1946 season, bringing with him his outstanding gridiron talents and a gang of topnotch football-playing buddies. That combination under Sauer has brought Kansas a share in the Big Six Conference championship two years running and the first undefeated season since 1923 [illegible] the Jayhawkers won five [illegible] and tied three.

Evans, who is known as "The Rifler" in the Midlands because of his uncanny passing skill, was a leading All-America backfield choice. In addition to his passing ability, Evans is a shifty runner and a brilliant pass-defender.

He won the Big Six passing crown for the second year in a row by completing 30 passes in 60 attempts without a single interception, gaining a total of 361 yards.

Some Other Good Backs

But bottling up Evans, an unlikely prospect, won't assure Georgia Tech of an easy time in the Orange Bowl. The Engineers from Atlanta still will have to contend with the Jayhawkers' two other crack passers, Red Hogan

Kansas State Wins Big Six Court Play

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Kansas State defeated vaunted Oklahoma A. and M. College, 50-43, topping the field and taking the championship here last night in the final game of the preseason big six basketball tournament.

Hank Iba's Aggies trailed the Manhattan five from the opening jump as Kansas State served warning that it will be a real threat in the national cage picture.

The Wildcats coached by Jack Garner, led 28-14 at the half and were never in serious trouble.

In the consolation matches of the final day of the midlands court meet, Iowa State sank Colorado, 49-40; Oklahoma downed Missouri, 54-46, and Kansas University slipped past Nebraska in an overtime, 64-60.

Harold Howey, Kansas State forward took scoring honors in the championship tilt, racking up six field goals and six free throws for 18 points.

Pritchard Sprints 79 Yards for Touchdown

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Pittsburgh, Dec. 21.—The Philadelphia Eagles took their first Eastern Division title in National Football League history today as they rolled over the Pittsburgh Steelers, 21-0, in the playoff for a crack at the Cardinals and the championship next Sunday in Chicago.

A crowd of 35,729 paid to see the game, only the third playoff since the birth of the National League in 1921. Several thousand fans had to stand but the gate ring failed to break the Forbes Field attendance record set last year in a Steeler-Washington Redskin game.

The Eagles looked like the champions they became. They were never in serious trouble after a blocked punt set up their first touchdown.

With the victory, Philadelphia ended a string of three straight years as Eastern runner-up and duplicated the score of their last regular season meeting with the Steelers. Earlier the Smoky City forces had taken a 35-24 triumph.

STATISTICS
Philadelphia	Pittsburgh
17 First downs	7
124 Net yards gained rushing	102
18 Forward passes attempted	18
11 Forward passes completed	4
131 Yards forward passing	82
2 Forwards intercepted by	0
36 Punting average	40
127 Total yards all kicks returned	63
2 Opponents' fumbles recovered	2
45 Yards lost by penalties	60

Pritchard Sprints 79 Yards

Although they ended their regular season with the same record as Pittsburgh—eight won and four lost—Coach Earl (Greasy) Neale's lads were in a class far above the Steelers today.

Tommy Thompson, Steeve Van Buren and Bosh Pritchard were the big difference. Thompson got off touchdown passes to Van Buren and Jack Ferrante in the first two periods and Pritchard, the former VMI sprinter, hung up the final touchdown on a 79-yard run in the third quarter.

In the third quarter, Pritchard's dash was easily the thriller of the day. It came at the end of Pittsburgh's first offensive series after intermission when Bob Cifers stepped back to kick.

Van Buren Scores on Pass

By the time Pritchard reached the Steelers' 30 there were no opponents near him, only four jobless blockers waving him over the goal.

Against a Steeler club that made only one scoring threat all afternoon and couldn't get inside the Eagle 40 until midway of the third period, Philadelphia romped to its opening score the second time it got the ball.

That was when Cifers' punt was blocked by the hard-charging Pete Pihos, the Eagles taking over on Pittsburgh's 14.

Two line plays netted a minus 1-yard before Thompson whipped a flat one to Van Buren. The league's best ground gainer went all the way, knocking down Tony Compagno as he crossed the goal line.

Cliff Patton then kicked the first of his three extra points.

Ferrante Goes Over

The second period was 6½ minutes old when the Eagles made it 14-0. This time, for a change, a host punt had nothing to do with it.

The Eagles merely started on their own 31 and went 69 yards to a touchdown. A clipping penalty helped but at the end was a 29-yard pass play, well-thrown by Thompson and brilliantly caught by Ferrante, who carried defenders

Kentucky, Aggies Drop From Unbeatens

Temple Terminates Wildcats' Streak

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Kentucky and Oklahoma A. and M., two of basketball's mightiest prospects, nursed the bruises of defeat today on the eve of a Christmas-slack week, giving rise t othe possibility that the campaign will be as upset-full as the football season just past.

Kentucky's tumble from the ranks of the undefeated was the biggest surprise. Temple did the trick at Philadelphia's Convention Hall last night by an amazing 60-69 score.

Kentucky was undefeated in seven games.

Oklahoma A. and M.'s defeat came in the finale of the Big Seven tournament at Kansas City. The Aggies were rated strong choices to win that tourney, even though they were the only nonleague team in the battling.

But Kansas State, establishing itself as a dark horse sensation of the new season, bounced off the Aggies by a 50-13 count, leading from the opening jump.

Two Washington, D. C. teams, Georgetown and George Washington have yet to taste defeat. Georgetown won its sixth straight last night against Richmond, 64-54, while George Washington chalked up its ninth in a row by walloping Clemson, 60-35.

This week's action will be on the slim side because of Christmas.

Madison Square Garden will have its three usual doubleheaders, playing tomorrow night instead of Thursday, and then staging the usual Tuesday and Saturday bills.

Tomorrow's twin program pits Utah State against CCNY and Oregon against Long Island U.

Oregon was to have played Niagara Saturday night at Buffalo, but the game was cancelled when the westerners' plne was grounded in Cleveland.

Tuesday Cornell meets NYU and Kentucky goes to the post against St. John's, and then Saturday it's NYU vs. Missouri and St. Francis vs. Arizona.

This Week's Slate Slim Due to Holiday

Utah, State, as part of its eastern tour which takes in the Garden game Monday, plays Duquesne Tuesday and Lawrence Tech Friday.

In the Mid-West, the unbeaten University of Illinois team goes to the post for the fifth time tomorrow night, playing host to Washington State in the first of a two-game series The second tilt is set for Tuesday.

The South is all quiet this week, save for Alabama playing Pittsburgh and Georgetown visiting Loyala of New Orleans.

W&M's Giermak Leads Virginia Pointmakers

Richmond, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—The State collegiate individual point-making race had grown tighter today, but Chester Giermak, William and Mary's big center from Chicago, still managed to remain in the No. 1 position.

Giermak led the Old Dominion collegians with 103 points for six games, including 45 field goals and 13 free tosses.

Four points behind, with 39 field baskets and 21 charity pitches, was Robert Goldsmith, Washington and Lee's sensational freshman center.

Clinging to third place in the point-making standings was George Pierson, Washington and Lee's sophomore forward, who had 95 points.

Georgetown Faces 6-Game Road Trip

While all the other local college teams enjoy the Christmas vacation, Georgetown starts out this week to face the most rugged part of its basketball schedule.

The Hoyas play the only game here in the Armory on Tuesday with Santa Clara, always a West Coast power, providing the opposition.

After that, Georgetown embarks on an ambitious tour that pits the Hoyas against six of the Nation's top teams. They play in New Orleans against Loyola Saturday and reach South Bend by a devious route for the grand climax with Notre Dame on January 5.

Coast Team Is Good

To get back to Tuesday's game—those Santa Clara Broncos figure to be tough enough to spoil Georgetown's trip before it gets started. Earlier this season, they split two games with UCLA. After losing, 47-42, they won, 55-50.

Here's a quick rundown of that tour that wasn't arranged by Cook's. After playing Loyola, Georgetown chases up to St. Louis for a December 30 date with St. Louis U. Already, the host team has beaten Minnesota and dazzled Arkansas State by a 90-38 score.

On New Year's Day, the Hoyas will be out to celebrate in their own unique way. This one's against Louisville U. at Louisville, Ky. Next day, Georgetown's squad will be surprised to find itself still in the same State for a change.

Bowling Green Next Stop

The Hoyas move over to Bowling Green to meet Western Kentucky State Teachers. This is the team Ripley called the best faced last year.

After a two-day despite, the Hoyas face Loyola of Chicago in Chicago Stadium. Georgetown beat the Loyola club here, 54-45. That was the night Capt. Andy Kostecka sizzled the Armory nets with a 27-point barrage.

The final game at Notre Dame, January 5, is the one the Hoyas want most to win. The Irish already have beaten Indiana and Northwestern and lost by only 2 points to Illinois.

After the rigorous trip, Georgetown comes home to face Maryland on Thursday, January 8. And it isn't unlikely that the neighborhood rivals may be able to pounce on a travel-weary team.

Kovacs, Van Horn Reach Net Finals

Miami, Fla., Dec. 21 (AP).—Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Calif., and Welby Van Horn, Knoxville, Tenn., today blasted their way into the finals of the National clay courts professional tennis championships and meet tomorrow for the title.

Kovacs defeated Dick McKee of Miami, 6—2, 6—1, 6—9, while Van Horn won from Bob Stubbs of Miami, 6—1, 6—1, 6—7. Van Horn paired with Jack Rodgers, also of Knoxville, to win the doubles title from Kovacs and Bob Decker of Miami Beach, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

Thompson Denies Threat to Quit

Pittsburgh, Dec. 21 (AP).—Alexis Thompson, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, new National Football League Eastern Division champions, tonight denied through a spokesman that he had expressed intent to quit the National Football League unless the league adopted a common draft of college players with the rival All-America Conference.

However, Thompson reiterated through the spokesman that he favored the common draft and would continue to fight for it."

Something New for Bulldogs

Georgia, for 1st Time in Years, Has No Triple-Threat Star

Athens, Ga., Dec. 21.—In four previous bowl outings, the Georgia Bulldogs have always had an all America back—a man who could pass, run and kick with equal vigor and deftness to post in front of the opposition and say, "Now stop him if you can."

This time it's different. The Georgia squad which faces Maryland in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl extravaganza has no real triple threat. The Bulldogs are a well-balanced team but this still doesn't make it any easier to do without the old All American standby.

When the Georgians trounced T.C.U. in the 1942 Orange Bowl, 40-26 and U.C.L.A. in the 1943 Rose Bowl, 9-0 they had fireball Frankie Sinkwich; when Tulsa felt Georgia power in the 1946 Oil Bowl, going down 20-6 and North Carolina fell, 20-10, in last year's Sugar Bowl, it was Charles (The Man) Trippi who ground them under his heel.

This year there is no triple threat as such. Quarterback Johnny Rauch is probably the finest passer in Red and Black history. Floyd Reid is a fine ball carrier at fullback. Dan Edwards is a pass receiver extraordinaire. But there's no man there with every ability rolled into one.

As the Georgians get down to serious preparations Monday it seems a little strange not to have one of those all conquering, dominating moleskinners on hand. It just doesn't seem like Georgia.

But Wally Butts will stack his chips on Rauch the passer, Reid the runner and Edwards the catcher against the Terrapins.

Sometimes you don't need an All American with three guys like those.

N. C. State, GW Tops in Southern

Richmond, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—The Southern Conference today found itself with two unquestionably fine basketball teams—North Carolina State and George Washington.

Before a basketball shot was fired this season, it was generally agreed that North Carolina State's Wolfpack, studded with freshmen and sophomore aces, would be a "shoo-in" to repeat as conference champion.

Today, the Wolfpack hasn't played a single Southern Conference contest, but State has won eight out of nine pre-Christmas games, bowing only to West Virginia, 68-64. Included among the Wolfpack's triumphs was Saturday night's 76-56 victory over St. John's of Brooklyn in Madison Square Garden.

George Washington, likewise loaded with freshmen and sophomores, had a clean record after nine starts.

The Colonials, coached by a former George Washington star, Arthur (Otts) Zahn, had to their credit six conference victories and didn't have a real scare in disposing of Wake Forest, Virginia Military Institute, Davidson, the University of Richmond, South Carolina and Clemson.

Victories over those six-loop teams put the Colonials far out in front. Behind them were Duke and Furman, each with one win and no defeats.

All of the 16 quintents, with the exception of Virginia and South Carolina, have completed their pre-Christmas basketball business. Tech plays Monuday night at the Quantico Marine base, and South Carolina invades Bowling Green, Ohio, in the lone game before the holidays.

Eagles Win Over Steelers

Paul White and Compagno across the line with him.

Pittsburgh's big moment, the only one in which it came close to scoring, followed Pritchard's dazzling third-stanza sprint.

Muha's punt had gone out on the Steeler 33 and Johnny Clement was the spark that pushed the hosts to Philadelphia's 9-yard line before they lost possession.

Steelers' Threat Fizzles

Clement, the Steelers' Mr. Zero, passed once to Elvie Nickel for 18 yards and then combined in a running attack with Compagno for two more first downs.

The threat fizzled, however, when Clement tried a jump pass on fourth down, fumbled and recoverd a yard short of the distance needed.

Pittsburgh finished with a sorry record of 4 completions on 18 passing attempts. Thompson, meanwhile, was clicking on 11 of his 17 aerials for 131 yards.

Reiges One-Man Band As Bulldogs Triumph

Compton, Calif., Dec. 21 (AP).—Benny Reiges, former UCLA quarterback, led the Los Angeles Bulldogs to a 19-7 victory today over the San Francisco Clippers in a Pacific Coast pro league game.

Reiges flipped a 26-yard scoring pass to Al Izmirian, converted, and then after the Clippers had tied it up, booted a 17-yard field goal to win the game in the fourth quarter.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Opening of Stanta Anita's 50-day meeting at Arcadia, Calif., next Saturday with a $50,000 stake event features a fancy horse-racing program for Christmas week.

In New Orleans, the Christmas Handicap will send 3-year-olds and older thoroughbreds over 6 furlongs in quest of a $3500 purse.

The Louisiana Handicap at the Fair Grounds Saturday is a mile and an eighth test for 3-year-olds and up with $10,000 at stake.

and Lynne McNutt, hard-hitting Forrest Griffith, a sophomore fullback who led the Big Six in scoring with 54 points, and Kansas' famed "Lighthorse Brigade" line.

The slight but shifty forward wall, averaging slightly more than 185 pounds per man, makes up for its lack of bulk in speed, alertness and drive. It compiled the best defensive record in the conference this season.

Outstanding man in the line is Cocaptain Otto Schellbacher, a 183-pound end who won the Big Six pass-catching crown for the second year in a row. Schellbacher snared 17 passes that gained 361 yards and scored four touchdowns in 1947. He also recovered a blocked punt for a fifth score to rank as one of the conference's leading point-makers.

Marvin Small, a rangy 180-pounder, is Schellbacher's running-mate at the other end. Don Ettinger fills one tackle slot, with Hugh Johnson and Dick Tomlinson alternating at the other. Don Fambrough, a 190-pounder who has converted 30 extra points, and Joe Crawford fill the guard berths, with Dick Monroe at center. Sauer also has three capable running backs in Bud French, Dick Bertuzzi, and Frank Pattee.

Kansas is a team that doesn't know what it is to quit. Twice during the season the Jayhawks came from behind in the last minute to win against Nebraska and Missouri. The remainder of Kansas' eight victims were Denver, Iowa State, South Dakota State, Kansas State, Oklahoma A. and M. and Arizona. Kansas played a scoreless tie with Texas Christian on a muddy, rain-swept field and was tied, 13 to 13, by Oklahoma, the conference cochampion.

In making their first bowl appearance, the Jayhawkers will be bucking an old jinx. No Big Six team ever has won a major bowl clash. Oklahoma has failed once and Missouri three times.

But that doesn't faze Kansas at all. The Jayhawks figure a victory at Miami will be a fitting climax for its two-year success story.

Stags Drop Bullets, 93-83

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Chicago Stags took over first place in the Western Division of the Basketball Association of America today and dropped the Baltimore Bullets into second spot by defeating them, 93 to 83, at Chicago Stadium.

The winners were paced by Forwards Max Zaslofsky and Stan Miasek, who scored 24 points and 25 points, respectively. High man for Baltimore was Center Kleggie Hermsen, who dropped in seven field goals and nine free throws for 23 points.

AT GULFSTREAM

DEAR FOLKS:

If you Benningites didn't get the Christmas money from my selections during the last week at Charles Town you have no one to blame but yourself. I haven't made a check yet but you should have gotten well heeled and no wisecracks about the times I have left you round at the heels. Well, we closed Charles Town on Saturday and it was a topnotch meeting. Only two days of bad tracks marred the session and luckily no serious injuries to riders. One horse had to be destroyed, however. Crowds were running close to the record 1946 December meeting and betting was off less than 2 per cent. Jimmy Baird, the Westchester, Pa., boy, led the jockeys after overcoming a lead established by George Cardoza. Lawless Miss, Boston Man and Annie's Dream renewed their rivalries. They are all champs in my book. Lawless Miss at 6 furlongs, Boston Man at 7 furlongs and longer routes and Annie's Dream at 4½ furlongs. I had a little personal satisfaction when I saw my consolation daily double pay-off in action for the first time. Horsemen claimed 15 horses at a $22,000 value. Tops was the $2500 Barrow and Lee gave for Fourth Estate. Only two jockeys were suspended—Stanley Austin and Jimmy Laurer—both for rough riding. From now until Bowie we're going to concentrate on Florida tracks.—Bill.

Pep and Estrada Head Boxing Bill

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Featherweight Champion Willie Pep's non-title eight rounder with Alvaro Estrada of Mexico at Lewiston, Me., Monday night tops the slim holiday week national boxing program.

Another Monday night fight features Jock Leslie, the Flint, Mich., contender who was beaten by Pep in a title contest at Flint last August. Leslie, making his first start since then, meets Angelo Ambrosano of Philadelphia, in a ten at New Orleans.

Speed, Figure Skating On Arena Program

Speed and figure skating features will supplement a Christmas celebration scheduled for the National Arena tonight, Director Don Victor announced last night.

Door and floor prizes will be awarded the skaters tonight, and skating will be extended from 11 p. m., the regular closing time, to midnight.

Georgia's Engineers Hit Season's Peak for Orange Bowl Contest

Miami, although Ziegler and Bowen are expected to be hale and hearty.

Mathews suffered a broken ankle in the Duke game and he may be able to hobble on the field for a few plays against Kansas. The loss of this able pass defender was the real story of Tech's defeat by Alabama and sharp-shooting Harry Gilmer and the narrow squeaks against Duke and Navy.

But although the lack of a Mathews to bat down passes put Tech in the hole against Navy, McCoy and Patton were the boys who pulled the game out of the fire. It was their first big test under pressure and McCoy ran for one touchdown while Patton passed for another.

Kansas will hold no terror for the Tech line, with Lightweight Center Lewis Hook back in full combat form. As long as the game is on even terms as far as the score is concerned, the Tech forewall relishes that close-in contact which often decides games in the third quarter when one line wilts and opposing backs rush through to pile up a walkaway.

This will be Tech's seventh Bowl trip and the Engineers have a 4 to 2 record to uphold. They beat California, 8 to 7, in the 1929 Rose Bowl; clawed Missouri, 21 to 6, in the 1940 Orange Bowl; beat Tulsa, 20 to 18, in the 1944 Sugar Bowl; and eased by St. Mary's, 20 to 6, in the 1947 Oil Bowl. They lost to Tulsa, 26 to 12, in the 1945 Orange Bowl, and to Texas, 14 to 7, in the 1943 Cotton Bowl.

Why let it be a passing fancy?

EVERY day you see them, swinging smoothly by.

And every time you see them, like as not, the same thing happens.

You fancy yourself traveling in style that's unmistakable anywhere, and eye-catching wherever you go.

You picture the fun you could have behind this big bonnetful of Fireball power, eager for your treadle-foot's nudge, as avid as you are for high adventure.

You picture the glorious comfort there must be in soft, coil springs all around and a ride as level as an honest man's look.

You picture the peace of mind that could be yours in a carriage so big, so sure, so steady—a car whose very wheel-rims lend security and control as well as softness to your going.

Why let such pleasant fancies be passing fancies only?

Why know Buick only from the sidewalk, when every day that passes could be bringing you nearer to owning one?

First step is simply to make up your mind you're going to own one of these style stars. Next is to see your nearest Buick dealer.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

ONLY BUICK HAS ALL THESE STAR FEATURES

AIRFOIL FENDERS — a sleek, car-length, tapering contour of distinctive beauty.
FIREBALL POWER — from valve-in-head straight-eight engines in two sizes.
ACCURITE CYLINDER BORING — smoothness from the start and an engine that "stays young."
SILENT ZONE BODY MOUNTINGS — scientifically placed for a firm and quiet ride.
FLITEWEIGHT PISTONS — for flashing action, swift response, reduced load on bearings.
BUICOIL SPRINGING — Buick-developed all-coil springing for perpetual smoothness and "panther-gait" ride.
FULL-LENGTH TORQUE-TUBE DRIVE — protects moving parts, gives steadiness in traveling.
PERMI-FIRM STEERING — light but positive control with reduced need for adjustments.

Revamped Setup For Commerce Said To Be Under Study

COMMERCE: The reorganization of this department along the pattern used in creating the Department of National Defense is reported to be under study. The plan is said to call for:

1. Creation of a new superstructure Department of Commerce to be headed by a policy-making Secretary with Cabinet status—a department that would be akin to the Defense Department in size and authority.

2. Under the Commerce Secretary would be three separate departments, each to be headed by a secretary who would not have Cabinet status. They would be a department of transportation, a department of communications and a department of industry. They would have the same relation to the Commerce Secretary as Air Forces, Navy and Army have to the Department of Defense.

In the department of transportation would be all of the Government's transportation agencies such as Maritime, Interstate Commerce, Civil Aeronautics, Inland Waterways and the like.

Federal Communications would be the one large agency under the communications secretary.

In the department of industry would be Commerce agencies such as Census, Patent Office, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, etc.; also, possibly several independent agencies such as Federal Trade, that deal with business.

If some such plan as this is recommended to Congress, it's a good bet that abolition of several boards and commissions of the affected agencies will be proposed. The agency activities would be placed under single administrators.

P. S.: Maritime officials may not know it, but their agency is the first one that's being studied on how it would fit into an overall transportation department, or within the present Commerce Department.

CHANGES: The postwar shakedown and turnover in Federal jobs continued at immense proportions during the past year. These are statistics gathered by Civil Service for the year that ended last June 30:

About 1,190,000 fulltime workers in the executive branch in this country were either fired or resigned voluntarily. Of that number, 484,200, or 41 per cent, quit and left the Federal service, and 33 per cent, or 388,300, were laid off in reductions of force.

Approximately 42,800 people were separated, but they were all able to find jobs via transfers to other agencies. Another 25,500 employes, or about 2 per cent, were fired on a charge such as misconduct, inefficiency, or disqualification. The remaining group, about 245,100, is accounted for mainly by extended leave without pay, etc.

These are tremendous figures, but they are all well under those reported for the previous year. For example, 2,096,000 were separated in the year that ended June 30, 1946; 1,081,500 quit voluntarily; 603,800 were laid off in reductions of force, and 108,100 were fired on charges.

Total Federal employment in this country has dropped to 1,700,000 from the wartime high of about three million.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: Henry L. Buckardt, a Civil Service official and president of the Illinois State Society here, has resigned to enter business in his home State . . . About 575 applications were filed with Civil Service for the tobacco inspector exam . . . Examinations for cartographers, photogrammetrists and geographers will be open until January 28. Send applications to: Army Map Service, 6500 Brooks la., City 16.

NOTES: Malcolm Kerlin, one of the best of Government career officials, is retiring from Export-Import Bank after 42 years of Federal service. He was executive officer of the Commerce Department for years . . . Wednesday will be pay day for many employes here whose regular pay period falls on Thursday, Christmas Day . . . Two chauffeurs of the Postoffice Department have been given that agency's top safety awards. They are: Joe Kinnahan, who has driven seven postmaster generals, and Frank Tompkins.

REVENUE STORY: This memo was circulated recently in the Internal Revenue Bureau: "A rough-draft manuscript, 'WHERE DOES THE FEDERAL TAX DOLLAR ORIGINATE?' has been lost in transit to the stenographic section."

WINDFALL: Early next month the Naval Gun Factory here will pay off a million dollars in claims to more than 10,000 of its employes who worked on night shifts between 1934 and 1944. The checks will average about $16 each.

A ruling several years ago by the Comptroller General forced the Gun Factory to recompute the wages it had paid its night workers during the 10-year period. In substance, the Comptroller ruled that night per diem workers must be paid the night differential in addition to their regular pay when they take annual or sick leave. The employes had been paid the lower daily rate before that decision.

HEAD BUMPED — Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad workers treat Richard C. Doyle, 28, of 4801 Montgomery lane, Bethesda, Md., for head cuts before taking him to Suburban Hospital. Doyle, a building contractor and former Marine aerial photographer, and a woman companion, were hurt when their car struck a tree at 3:30 a. m. yesterday in the 5600 block of Western ave. nw. His companion, Mrs. March Clement, 24, of 5915 14th st. nw., suffered a possible fracture of the right ankle

Man and Woman Injured in City As Car Hits Tree

A 25-year-old woman was killed early yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding overturned on Addison Chapel rd. between Sheriff rd. and Eastern ave., North Englewood, Md.

In District accidents, Richard C. Doyle, 26, building contractor and former aerial photographer in the Marine Corps, and his woman companion were hurt when their car struck a tree in the 5600 block of Western ave. nw., at 3:30 a. m., yesterday.

Dead in the Maryland accident was Margaret Buchanan of 820 L st. se., a passenger in an automobile driven by William C. Anderson, 22 of 1328 58th ave., Chapel Oaks, Md. Anderson was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving, and bond was fixed at $2500.

Woman's Head Crushed

Police said Anderson told them he was driving west on Addison Chapel rd. when an approaching truck turned to the wrong side of the road. He said he swerved right and then left to avoid collision, and lost control of his car. His passenger's head was crushed when the car overturned.

Doyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Eugene Doyle, of 4801 Montgomery lane, Bethesda, Md., suffered head cuts and bruises in the Western ave. accident. His companion, Mrs. March Clement, 24, of 5915 14th st. nw., sustained a possible fracture of the right ankle.

Both were admitted to Suburban Hospital, where they were taken by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad. Their conditions were described as "fair" by hospital physicians.

Arlington Policeman Hurt

Arlington County Police Pvt. Raymond Wanner was hurled through the canvas top of a truck when thrown from his motorcycle as he applied brakes to avoid between crushed between the truck and a passing bus.

At Arlington Hospital, he was admitted with double fracture of his right leg. His condition was described as "fair."

The accident occurred on Filmore st. in Arlington at about 8 a. m. Wanner was chasing a speeding automobile when the A. B. & W. bus made a right turn off Lee hwy. onto Filmore st., leaving too little space for Wanner's motorcycle to pass the truck.

The truck, police said, was operated by James H. Crist, jr., 16, of 3700 S. 6th st., Arlington.

Typhoid Outbreak Rises to 10 in Pa.; Bride Is Stricken

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Lancaster County's typhoid fever outbreak mounted to 10 cases today, with the bride to whose wedding reception the infection has been traced included among the two latest victims.

Health authorities said the bride, Margaret Finkgelimer Bollinger, 19, was ill at the home of her parents near Mountville.

Dread of Soviet Held Dooming Marshall Plan

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Former United States Minister to Australia and Bulgaria George H. Earle, strong advocate of the atom-bombing of Russia, said tonight the Marshall Plan would fail because Europeans outside the iron curtain "dread and many expect" Soviet occupation.

"Their hearts and real efforts will not be in reconstruction, the results of which they think probably will be seized by the Soviet government," Earle said in a letter to President Truman and Congress.

New Md. Law on Delinquents Praised by County Officials

By William H. Smith

Prince Georges County's new Juvenile Court law, effective July 1, has placed the parents of wayward juveniles squarely on the spot.

Recently-invoked provisions of the law have made it increasingly apparent that adults, instead of juveniles, can be held responsible for the depredations of their offspring, and county officials have clearly indicated confidence that they have a new, potent weapon with which to combat juvenile delinquency.

The law, for the first time, gives the court ample authority to strike at the source of delinquency—and county authorities intend to do just that.

Law Best In State

Roy Bright, senior parole officer for Prince Georges and several nearby counties, said yesterday that the new county law can be considered one of the best in Maryland in that it contains some of the "best features" of a number of juvenile court plans in effect in other counties. It was adopted, he pointed out, only after most of the "approved" plans had been thoroughly studied.

One of the most effective features of the measure, however, is that it gives the court broad powers in holding parents responsible for their children's action. In effect, it places the responsibility for juvenile delinquency squarely on those parents.

The new court, under the law, can press charges of juvenile delinquency against "any parent, guardian or other adult for any wilful act or omission contributing to, encouraging or tending to cause any condition within the jurisdiction of the court." Any parental action even remotely connected with the delinquency of his children can result in criminal prosecution.

This provision of the law is backed by rigid penalties providing the maximum fines of $500, two years in prison, or a combination of both.

Until the present law went into effect, it was virtually impossible to convict a parent of charges resulting from his children's actions, Bright said. Only in cases involving morals, or clear-cut evidence of gross neglect, were parents held responsible.

Now, however, a parent can be charged with an offense as trivial as permitting his children to remain on the streets at late hours. And it is up to the court, and the court alone, to determine what hours are "reasonable" for children of various ages.

The few cases against parents in the county so far have resulted in dismissals, along with warnings. But, according to Judge Arthur P. Owen, violations in the future won't be treated so lightly.

In dismissing charges against the parents of 12 juveniles who were permitted to remain out at late hours, Judge Owens made it clear he intended to take full advantage of the new law and he warned of increasingly stiff penalties if violations persist.

Getting at Roots

Only by holding adults responsible can the county get to the root of its juvenile evils," the judge said. The present law gives him ample authority to affix parental responsibility.

Prince Georges was one of the last counties in Maryland to set up a separate Juvenile Court law, but believes its delay has given it time to prepare a more comprehensive act than those in effect in other areas. Most Maryland counties provided for Juvenile Courts under a general State law, adopted in 1945, but Prince Georges delegates exempted themselves because they preferred to draft their own measure.

In the nearby area, Montgomery also has its own Juvenile Court setup. St. Marys, Calvert and Charles Counties all operate under the State law, with Circuit Court judges presiding over closed Juvenile Court hearings.

Nail, Lath Gray Market Flourishes In District

Phone Call Brings Rapid Delivery at Premium; Builders Hit Irregular Sales

A phone call to a local service station will bring you a load of scarce rock lath, an essential material in home construction, if you can pay $1.85 per bundle. The regular price is around $1.25.

Organized builders have charged that nails, rock lath and other building materials were being offered for sale by chicken hatcheries, beauty parlors and other firms not normally handling such items, disrupting the regular flow of materials through normal channels.

The operator of one service station described the system whereby scarce lath was available at the higher figure.

Purchased Through Friends

"Truckers buy rock lath from friends or relatives employed in northern manufacturing plants and then sell it through the South to builders who need it," he explained.

He takes orders from local builders needing the lath and the truckers deliver loads to building sites. He receives 10c per bundle, with $1.75 going to the trucker. All transactions are in cash.

There are no price controls over building materials and the transaction is perfectly legal.

The $1.85 was described as a new high in rock lath costs by a builder who requested his name not be disclosed. He said the previous price was $1.50 per bundle.

Technique Explained

Another builder explained the technique of some operators who managed to buy a supply of scarce materials:

"They call you up and want to know if you need nails, rock lath or whatever it is they're selling. They won't identify themselves other than by initials. You can't even learn who's selling it from the truck driver who delivers it. He doesn't know or won't say."

All transactions are for cash, the builder added. Nails are bringing $12.50 to $20 per keg in such sales. He has had no calls within the last month, he reported.

The National Association of Home Builders has announced it has turned over to the Joint Congressional Committee on Housing documented evidence concerning gray market operations.

"There is little doubt that a gray or black market is constantly growing in scarce building materials as regular distribution is diverted," the Association stated.

"Unless the gray market situation is cleared up," NAHB warned, "it can have a very serious effect on the progress of home construction. It is hampering building now, unnecessarily increasing costs, and steps must be taken to plug up leaks in the supply pipe line and keep it flowing steadily."

Two Farm Shows Are Scheduled

College Park, Md., Dec. 21 (AP).—Two agriculture shows, including crop contests for both adult and junior farmers, are slated for the first week of January at Baltimore.

The forty-first annual corn and grain show, also at Baltimore, will be held January 7-8. Its exhibits will feture 21 classes of grain and seed.

All entries for both shows must arrive at show headquarters by the morning of January 6. Both events are under the supervision of the extension service of the University of Maryland.

Wife Arrested, Brother Sought in Two Shootings

Victims Wounded In Leg at Climax of Family Arguments

Police yesterday were investigating two shootings which they said developed from family arguments.

Mrs. Bertha Glimps, 30, of 1406 1st st. ne., was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on her husband, Julius, 35.

Police said Glimps was shot in the right leg with a .45-caliber automatic following an altercation. Glimps was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Police reported Saturday night that John Albert Johnson, 36, was shot in the leg and abdomen after an argument at his home, 1106 Columbia rd. nw. He was first treated at Freedmen's Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital.

Police said they are seeking his brother, Charles Ellis Johnson, 29, of 1526 5th st. nw., who, they said, left the house after the shooting.

Thieves Raid Restaurant After Hours

After-hour thieves removed the makings of a riotous holiday feast after entering the Little Iron Horse restaurant here through a skylight, Richard E. Cannaday, proprietor, reported to police yesterday.

Cannaday said they took from his restaurant at 1418 Florida ave. ne.; 30 fifths of whisky, 30 miniature bottles of liquor, one box of sausage meat, six chickens, two pounds of pork loin chops, and cigarettes and change from a vending machine.

In another housebreaking case yesterday, Pearl Davis of 1133 6th st. nw., told police someone entered her basement apartment Saturday night and made off with a fur coat, a ladies' suit, several dresses, and a .32-caliber revolver. Police estimated her loss at $85.

The following owners reported theft of their automobiles over the weekend: Calvin Cafritz, 2301 Foxhall rd. nw.; Milton Latt, 2700 Woodley pl. nw.; Mrs. Virginia Markham, 36 Longfellow st. nw., and Sam Sckanker, 2500 N. 16th st., Arlington, Va.

William S. Cherry of 4502 Foote st. ne., truck driver, reported the theft of a panel body truck owned by Thaddeus Reddich of 1527 S st. nw.

Harris Trial Scheduled to Resume Today

With Defense Counsel Robert I. Miller recovered from illness the trial of Mrs. Minnie Harris, 37, charged with the ax-slaying of her husband, James, 40, is slated to be resumed today in District Court.

The two-day old proceedings came to a halt Friday when Associate Justice Edward M. Curran was informed of Miller's illness.

Prosecutor Arthur McLaughlin has indicated that the Government will rest its case late today after Police Handwriting Expert Ira Gullickson takes the stand.

Gullickson is expected to testify that Mrs. Harris' handwriting is identical with that which appeared on a "confession" note sent to an associate of Harris last September. The note was signed by a "Jimmy Cohen," a name, police said was fictitious.

Harris, business agent for the Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers Union, was found dead in a pool of blood in the bedroom of his home last April 28.

Two Strikes

Bowlers Use Pins in Row; Both Held

Two men who used bowling pins to knock each other down were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon Saturday night.

The two bowlers, Henry T. Hinnant, 37, 1213 8th st. nw., and Columbus B. Knox, 26, 81 Pierce st. nw., were treated at Freedmen's Hospital for cuts. The argument occurred at the Penn bowling alley, 1207 Taylor st. nw.

Felled by Statuette

Another unusual weapon used that night was a statuette which felled John A. O'Flaherty, 42, of 2237 Q st. nw., and sent him to Garfield Hospital with numerous scalp cuts, according to police.

The statuette was wielded by an unidentified man who had accompanied O'Flaherty to his room, police said.

Police charged John Dailey, 26, 226 H st. nw., with assault with a dangerous weapon when Estelle Prince, 30, of the same address, was treated for an icepick stab in her back at Gallinger Hospital.

Wilson Dirl, 24, 1019 13th st. se., was similarly charged when George Hazelwood, 36, 1035 13th st. se., was stabbed in the chest, arm and head with a knife during an argument at Dirl's address, according to police. Hazelwood was treated at Casualty Hospital, and later admitted to Walter Reed Hospital.

Treated for Cuts

The following were treated for cuts at Freedmen's Hospital after altercations yesterday and Saturday night:

Orenzo Williams, 30, 715 M st. nw.; Jerome J. Shell, 39, 1825 R st. nw.; Ruth Williams, 26, and Eddie Williams, 26, both of 1008 6th st. nw.; Edward M. Parker, 33, 1329 9th st. nw., who said he lost $35 during a struggle; Lewis L. Thomas, 51, 462 K st. nw.; Theodore Williams, 24, 621 Rhode Island ave. nw.; Starling Patterson, 33, 1134 10th st. nw., and James M. Collins, 22, 1538 8th st. nw., who was struck on the head with a bottle.

James E. Fox, 36, 417 W st. sw., was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for face injuries after being struck by an unknown object.

VFW Seeks School Book Investigation

An investigation of District public school textbooks in the social science and history fields has been asked by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the District of Columbia.

The inquiry, which VFW has asked Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee, to conduct was "predicated on the discovery by the VFW of six so-called Rugg textbooks on the approved list of school books," Charles S. Sullivan, jr., VFW official, said.

Sullivan, in a letter to Dirksen, stated that VFW was anxious to know how many more "pro-Communist" textbooks are on public school lists. Information was requested on the manner in which the United States Constitution and American history are taught and on why the superintendent of schools and the Board of Education failed to prohibit use of subversive books.

Previously, the VFW had demanded a congressional investigation of use of the textbook "Building Citizenship" in the public schools. Hearings on the controversial textbook got under way earlier this month in the House District Subcommittee on Health, Education and Recreation, and were recessed until January 15 by Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), subcommittee chairman.

500 Witness Dedication of Outdoor Crib

An outdoor creche—or manger crib—was dedicated yesterday at 16th and R sts. nw., before 500 persons.

Ceremonies were centered outside the home of the Washington Council, District of Columbia Chapter, Knights of Columbus, sponsoring an outdoor crib for the first time.

The crib was blessed by the Rev. Samuel Cummings, Prior of the Friars of the Atonement, Catholic University. Main speaker was James C. Naughton of Washington, State deputy for the District of Columbia chapter, Knights of Columbus. Father Cummings is chaplain of the D. C. Chapter.

W. Harry Lee, chairman of the D. C. Chapter, Knights of Columbus, presided.

The idea of the outdoor crib was conceived by Joseph E. McCann. Music was furnished by the Elks Boys Band, directed by Harry Lehr.

Hotel Manager Is Robbed of $15, Taxi Driver of $170

William R. Merrill, 32, said he was in the lobby of the hotel alone about 4:30 a. m. when the masked man, holding his right hand in his coat pocket as though he had a gun, walked in and demanded the money in the cash drawre.

There was only $15, Merrill said, and he held it out to the man, who grabbed the money and fled. Merrill described the thief as a slender, light-skinned Negro about 5 feet, 6 inches tall, wearing a gray hat and coat, and glasses.

Cab Driver Robbed

Earlier Francis L. Griffith, 33, of 1636 Trinidad ave., ne., a cab driver, reported that two Negro passengers he picked up at the Greyhound Bus Terminal, 12th st. and New York ave. nw., at 1:30 a. m., attacked him and stole his wallet containing $170.

Griffith said the men ordered him to drive to the southeast section. At Morris rd. and Erie st. se., one seized him from behind, and pulled him from the cab. After taking his wallet, the men fled on foot.

Three young Negroes, one with a fresh cut over an eye, assaulted him in the 1200 block of North Capitod st. at 10:45 Saturday night and robbed him of $80, Bland Boonhart, 41, of 65 M st. nw., told police. Boonhart was treated for bruises at Sibley Hospital.

Wallet Stolen

In a similar assault an hour earlier, Hiram J. Knox, 73, who lives at Soldiers Home, said three men beat him in the 700 block of 8th st. nw. taking his wallet containing $10. Knox was treated at Casualty Hospital for bruises. Police arrested a 25-year-old man who is being held for investigation.

Two boys, 14 and 16, were arrested in connection with a $14 pocketbook snatching at 7 p. m. Saturday night, in which Miss Marie A. Lyons, 32, of 652 E st. ne. was the victim.

Miss Lyons said she was walking in the 500 block of 6th st. ne. with her sister, Miss Kathryn Lyons, when her pocketbook was taken. Police said the boys had the purse and money. They were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Negroes Assail Handed-Down Schoolhouses

"Hand-me-down" school buildings for Negro students were denounced as inadequate and discriminatory at two meetings here yesterday.

"Hand-me-down" schools are a factor in the inferior caliber of Negro education compared with white, Dr. George Davis of 110 50th st. ne., told more than 50 parents of Browne Junior High School students meeting at Jones Memorial Church, and urged them to continue their protest.

A parent-sponsored strike has been directed against Browne school and two annexes since December 3.

A National Negro Council meeting of about 75 persons at Metropolitan Baptist Church adopted a resolution calling upon Negro parents in Washington to accompany their children to school today for a "first-hand look-see at the inequalities of the old white hand-me-down Negro school buildings."

Edgar F. Brown, National Negro Council director, who drew up the resolution, said a volunteer picket group was ready to form lines at the local Negro schools today. He will meet with a group of ministers on the "strike" situation at 1 p. m. today, he said.

Brown's meeting yesterday was prompted by the Browne school strike, but parents at the school disowned his meeting and proposals.

Speaking at the parents' meeting at Jones church, Joseph Williams of 4538 Eads st. ne., said it was expected that, at a parents' meeting with the Board of Education's buildings and grounds committee at 4:30 p. m. today at the Franklin Building, the committee would offer to put Blow and Webb annexes to Browne "in condition for us."

"Your representatives will stand firm against such a proposal."

Mrs. Nellie Greene, another spokesman, said Terrell Junior High School was given an annex six years ago, "an old elementary school." They were promised that it would be fixed up. They started last week. If our children go to Blow and Webb annexes, the same thing would happen."

Brown at his meeting announced that a million-dollar fund was to be raised throughout the Nation to buy radio time for a campaign for equal rights.

At the end of the meeting, Bernard A. Simmons of 1921 Bennett pl. ne., who said he was on the steering committee of Browne P-TA, told reporters Brown had "no sanction from the P-TA whatsoever."

The Browne P-TA group is interested in the Browne situation, he added, "not the problems of Georgia or other parts of the country."

The Browne School P-TA will hold a meeting at 8 p. m. today to which P-TA presidents and civic leaders throughout the city have been invited.

Few Hydrants Aid Cabin John Firemen

The Cabin John, Md., volunteer fire company no longer is a department without a fireplug, but it still has very few.

Millions of gallons of water run past the firehouse in the District water conduit on MacArthur blvd., formely Conduit rd., but until a few years ago there wasn't a fire hydrant in the town. Now Cabin John has hydrants served by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission from the Burnt Mills filtration plant on the other side of the county.

All of the department apparatus is fitted for service in an area without hydrants. Its new pumper engine carries a 500-gallon booster tank, so the department arrives at a fire ready to go to work. The truck can draw water from wells, streams and cisterns.

Cabin John VFD has been in existence 17 years. David S. Touhey, who has a tavern next to the firehouse, formerly was chief, but now is president of the fire board.

The fire alarm sounds in his lunch room or in his bedroom, and he hastens to sound the siren. His son, Kenneth, is assistant fire chief. The chief of the department is O. M. Howell, and the department captains are Hugo Schmidt and Alvin Lynch.

Restaurant Finds Frank Ad Pays Off

It pays to advertise frankly.

Daniel L. White, restaurateur, said he found that out yesterday when business literally boomed after he placed his unusual ad in The Washington Post.

White, operator of J's Resturant, 2434 Wisconsin ave. nw., told the public in large-size ad print: "We don't have any customers."

"We've been open almost a month and the darn place looks like Grant's Tomb. It's so quiet here you can hear a pastrami sandwich drop. It's getting to the point where the waitresses serve each other all day long. But, criminy, how many cheese blintzes can they eat?"

White invited customers to dinner yesterday, for free if they didn't think the fare worth the charges. If he found he couldn't "turn out a decent meal at a fair price," he said, he'd open up a barber shop.

Last night, he said he was still "perplexed." He expected some pick-up in business, but not four times his previous Sunday trade.

"They all paid their bills, too, and said they were satisfied," White said. "The help's going crazy with all this business."

Visitor Loses $780

Jenkins Jones Gilmore, of Earling, W. Va., reported to police the loss of his wallet, containing $780. It was either lost or lifted, he said, while he was en route Saturday night between the Greyhound Bus Terminal, 1110 New York ave. nw., and the Plaza Hotel, 1st and D sts. ne.

Yule Trees at Hospitals

Prince Georges General Hospital Guild and Girl Scouts of Troop 64, College Park, and Troop 59, Mount Rainier, will decorate Christmas trees at the hospital.

Patients' dinner on Christmas Day will be served on trays with covers, napkins and favors in a Christmas motif.

To Debate Va. Sales Tax

Pros and cons of a Virginia sales tax will be debated at a meeting of the Columbia Pike Citizens Association tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Patrick Henry School, S. Fillmore and S. 7th sts.

George Updegraff, president of the Ballston Citizens Association, will speak in favor of the proposal, and a representative of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce will oppose it.

Food Gifts Collected

Food, clothing and gifts for the needy of Silver Spring, Takoma Park and Colesville, Md., area are being collected by the Civitan Club of Silver Spring.

The higher cost of living, according to Representative Almond (D., Va.) is a threat to the efficiency of Government workers.

Almond, who has offered bills to boost the pay for postal and other Government workers, said that "men cannot be expected to give the best service when their minds are on the vital problem of how to live decently."

Almond's bills provide for an $800 yearly increase for employes whose pay is fixed at an annual rate, and for an additional 40 cents an hour for those paid by the hour or on a part time basis.

Ray L. Huff, Welfare Chief, Dead at 52 of Heart Attack

Ray L. Huff, director of the District Department of Public Welfare, died yesterday at his home at 3124 Westover dr. se., after an illness of several months.

Mr. Huff's physician, Dr. B. W. Leonard, listed cause of death as "heart trouble."

Mr. Huff, who had spent most of his life working for underprivileged people, became welfare department director in February, 1943. At that time, he had spent six years in District service as general superintendent of District penal institutions.

Mr. Huff, a vigorous fighter for more welfare funds, put the onus for inadequate financing of public welfare functions in the District squarely on Congress during his administration of the welfare post.

Admitting frankly that the District's Public Welfare Department was not doing an adequae job, Mr. Huff charged Congressmen with "Government by catastrophe" in their financing of welfare operations.

Held Welfare Not "Emotional"

It was is theory that "public welfare is not an emotional process. It is a means for public security. It requires sober, considered attention before catastrophe strikes."

As a penologist, Mr Huff believed that "the prison is a community agency, just as is the school. It should be bound tightly to the community, for each prisoner, from the day he enters until he leaves . . . Reputable citizens unwittingly contribute to, aid and abet the criminal community by reason of their complacency toward institutions through which the moral code is developed . . . As a matter of fact, most prisons have been built for maximum custody at great expense, and are equipped to do little besides keeping prisoners there for the average prison term of two years."

In 1944, Mr. Huff was the center of a storm of controversy which resulted in the separation of District penal institutions from the Board of Public Welfare. At that time he was acting in the dual capacity of director of the Welfare Department and acting general superintendent of District penal institutions.

Taught at Pittsburgh U.

This dual role was criticized by the Rover Committee and the United States Comptroller General. Mr. Huff later was called as a witness when an inquiry board sat on the qualifications of Howard B. Gill, his successor in the penal position, after a series of sensational escapes from the District jail.

Born February 8, 1895, in Pittsburgh, Pa., Mr. Huff in 1916 received a degree of master of arts from the University of Pittsburgh. He later did graduate work in the social science at the University of Alabama, Harvard University and George Washington University.

Following World War I, in which he attained the rank of captain, Mr. Huff taught economics and political science in the University of Pittsburgh. Later he became a teacher, director, vocational counselor and principal of the Pittsburgh school for defective children.

In 1928, he was appointed instructor in educational administration at Southern Methodist University. The following year he was named director of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Corrections and in 1931 was named supervisor of parole for the Federal Bureau of Prisons. At the time of his appointment as superintendent of District penal institutions in 1937 he had been an executive for the Federal Parole Board.

Named Prison Warden

In 1940, Mr. Huff left the post of District penal superintendent to become warden of the Federal prison at McNeil Island, Wash. However, before he assumed his duties there, he became ill and spent several weeks in Mount Alto Hospital.

When he recovered from that illness, the District Commissioners reappointed him to the post of District penal institution superintendent, after refusing to accept the first candidate advanced by the Board of Public Welfare, Claude O. Botkin.

Mr. Huff was a Mason, a Shriner, a member of the Knights Templar, a member of the Kiwanis Club and a member of the Washington Board of Trade.

He also was a member of the American Association of Social Workers, the National Education Association, the American Parole Association, the American Prison Association, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Delta Kappa, Pi Gamma Mu and the American Legion. He was the author of several articles on criminal law and criminology.

Meredith Nicholson Dead at 81

Indianapolis, Dec. 21 (AP).—Meredith Nicholson, 81, novelist, diplomat and newspaperman, died in the Methodist Hospital here today after an illness that kept him in semi-retirement for several years.

The Hoosier author's best-known book was a mystery novel, "The House of a Thousand Candles," still popular after 40 years. He also wrote "The Port of Missing Men," "A Hoosier Chronicle," "Broken Barriers," three volumes of essays and a novelized biography of Andrew Jackson.

Long active in the Democratic Party, Nicholson was appointed Minister to Paraguay in 1933, and Minister to Venezuela in 1935. He was assigned to Nicaragua in 1938, but ill health forced his retirement and return to Indianapolis in 1941.

Nicholson went to work on the old Indianapolis Sentinel while he was in his teens, but he soon shifted to the Indianapolis News. For 12 years he moved upward from reporter to the desk of State, telegraph, exchange and literary editor.

The success of "The House of a Thousand Candles" caused him to begin full-time literary production.

Balsam Fir Held Best Yule Tree

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 21 (AP).—Brightly trimmed, Christmas trees might have the same meaning regardless of species, but State Forester H. C. Buckingham says the balsam fir has definite advantages for the home.

Buckingham insists the balsam fir is best because it's the most flexible, and it's safest for children because its needles aren't scratchy.

"Although cedar and spruce have attractive shapes," he said, "their needles are sharp. And pines shed their needles very rapidly. Spruce and cedar are too compact for many tastes, and pine in many cases has too much space between the branches."

Mark Hellinger Dies at 44; Columnist, Movie Producer

MARK HELLINGER

Hollywood, Dec. 21 (AP).—Film Producer-Newspaper Writer Mark Hellinger, the first tale-spinner about the little guys in show business, died today of a heart attack. He was 44.

Hellinger died about 2 a. m. in the arms of his wife, Ziegfeld Follies Queen Gladys Glad, at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. He had been taken there two hours earlier.

The sudden death of one of the youngest movie makers shocked Hollywood, which 10 years ago welcomed the famed Broadway columnist from New York. Hellinger, after a stretch at screen writing, had barely had a start at producing movies with the same down-to-earth twist that touched his short stories.

Hellinger was a prolific writer. He had turned out more than 6000 short stories, plays, movie scripts, sports columns, jokes and novels.

Born in New York City March 21, 1903, he launched his writing career on Zit's, a theatrical weekly. There, a wag said, he became adept at boiling down a three-line paragraph into a full column.

In 1923, young Mark got a job on the New York Daily News, and Broadway was his beat. His news stories about the joys and tragedies of the roaring twenties packed so much zip, sobs and chuckles that in six months he had a signed column.

In 1930, Hellinger switched to the Mirror and also wrote the last Ziegfeld Follies produced by Ziegfeld himself, "Hot-Cha." He also stretched his energy from 1930 until 1937 to include two books, a Sunday newspaper page and a sportsman's manual.

Hellinger became ill two days ago. In September this year he had been in the hospital briefly for a checkup.

His short stories followed the style of O. Henry, and like O. Henry, Hellinger wrote about New York City and its people. Two of his books of short stories were entitled "Moon Over Broadway" and "The Ten Million."

Museum to Give Play Despite Row With Stagehands

Despite its dispute with the local stagehands union, the Children's Museum of Washington announced yesterday that it will present another in its series of plays December 27 at Lisner Auditorium.

John H. Dorsey, attorney for the museum, said that its board of directors has rejected a union offer to reduce the number of stagehands required at each performance of the plays from nine to five men. The Children's Museum previously filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board against the Theatrical Stage Employes Local 22 (AFL), declaring the union had forced it to hire nine unneeded stagehands at each performance.

The museum's next play is "Alice in Wonderland." At its previous play, November 22, the museum attempted to use high school youths as stagehands, but after union men appeared the museum agreed to pay them.

Vandegrifts Entertain at Holiday Fete

By Bessie Hackett

BRIGHT green and red holly wreaths hanging on the stately portals of the Marine commandant's house at the corner of G and 8th sts. se., yesterday greeted the many friends who attended Gen. and Mrs. Alexander Archer Vandegrift's annual eggnog party.

The affair, one of the friendliest and most colorful of the Christmas season, served as a welcome to Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clifton B. Cates, who stood in the receiving line with the hosts and who will occupy the gracious old house after the first of the year when General Cates succeeds General Vandegrift as commandant of the Marine Corps.

The house wore a holiday air. Branches of evergreens banked the mantelpieces in the large downstairs rooms and, with the sparkling crystal chandeliers, were reflected in the huge gilt-framed mirrors. Sprays of holly, heavy with gay red berries, stood in tall vases and the long buffet table in the dining room was centered with an "icicle tree" of delicate glass. A lighted Christmas tree stood in a corner of the closed-in porch, where punch was served.

Men Resplendent

Most of the women present wore black . . . but this was a party where the men, the majority in dressy Marine Corps blues ablaze with decorations, far outshone the ladies. Adding to the festivity, too, was the scarlet-coated group of Marine Corps musicians, who played throughout the two-hour affair.

Both ladies in the receiving line wore long black dinner gowns. Mrs. Vandegrift was in velvet with a jade brooch at the low V-neckline and a corsage of green and white orchids pinned to her shoulder, while Mrs. Cates' costume was featured by silver sequins at the shoulder and a slit, sheathlike skirt. A large purple orchid was pinned at her waist. Their husbands were resplendent in their dress blues with five rows of campaign ribbons.

General Vandegrift was beaming at the congratulations heaped upon him all evening for the rich eggnog which is his specialty. He still keeps the recipe secret but admitted he had mixed it the day before to allow for "mellowing."

Defense Chiefs There

Being welcomed by their scores of Washington friends were Lieut. Col. Alexander Archer Vandegrift, jr., and his bride, the former Nancy Lee Baker of Fairfax County, who came down from Philadelphia to spend Christmas with their families. Receiving a hearty welcome, too, were Gen. and Mrs. A. H. Turnage, recently returned from Honolulu and who drove up from their home in Widewater, Va., for the party.

Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal and the new Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Louis Denfeld, in civilian clothes, arrived for a cup of eggnog and with apologies that their wives were unable to be present. Passing through the receiving line, they gravitated toward a group which included Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Attorney General Tom Clark, Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan and Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross.

Hills Going to Cuba

Vice Admiral and Mrs. Harry W. Hill were still taking bows for the eggnog party they themselves had given the previous evening at their War College quarters. They were saying "Merry Christmas and goodby," for they'll be leaving today to spend two weeks at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John C. Hill, and their two small children.

A Christmassy sight was Miss Florence King, daughter of Fleet Admiral and Mrs. Ernest J. King, who wore a ballerina-length frock of electric blue satin with matching hat on her brown hair. She was accompanied by her brother, Lieut. (j.g.) Ernest J. King, jr., USN, who came up from Norfolk to spend the week with his family.

The Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco Van Kleffens, was present, escorting tall, slender Mrs. Van Kleffens, whose dress of black jersey was topped by a fuchsia velvet chapeau.

Taking turns serving eggnog, punch and coffee were Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, Mrs. John L. Sullivan, Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Mrs. A. H. Turnage, Miss Marion Baker, Mrs. Ray Robinson, Mrs. Field Harris, Mrs. DeWitt Peck, Mrs. Elmer Hall, Mrs. Harold Rosecrans, Mrs. R. C. Kilmartin, Mrs. Capers Jones, Mrs. Julian Smith, Mrs. W. T. Clement, Mrs Louis J. Fields, Mrs. Paul Drake, Mrs. Allan Sutter and Mrs. John H. Masters.

To California

Mrs. Halley G. Maddox left by plane on Wednesday to spend the holidays in California, her former home. While there she will visit her daughter, Mrs. George W. Gleason, of Hollywood, and her mother, Mrs. Helen Leppar, in Beverley Hills. Before returning to her apartment in the Shoreham Hotel on January 20, Mrs. Maddox will visit several other relatives and close friends on the coast.

By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

MARINE CORPS "blues" stole the show from even the newest of "new look" frocks at the eggnog party given by Gen. and Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift at their home yesterday in honor of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clinton B. Cates. Most resplendent of all were the host himself, extreme right, and his successor as commandant, as they stood in the receiving line with Mrs. Cates, left, and Mrs. Vandegrift

Hurjas Hosts at Yuletide Party

A MUSICAL Christmas tree . . . St. Nick in person . . . a huge bowl of eggnog, a laden buffet table . . . and a whole house full of carolers and merry guests.

That was the picture yesterday afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja entertained at their annual Christmas party. In former years it was held on the holiday eve, but this year the hosts decided to change the date in order that more of their friends might be able to be with them. They'll entertain the day before Christmas again this year, but for a smaller group.

As in other years, the party brought together a group of musical minded guests who grouped around the piano to sing carols or listen to talented musicians. Kurt Hetzel, the pianist was there with his wife; and there was Sergt. William Heasley, chapel organist at Fort Myer; and Mme. Bagger Plum, contralto, who led the singing.

The Hurja home was decorated with gay Christmas lights both inside and out as the guests began arriving. Evergreens were in evidence everywhere, and high red candles lighted the dining room where a tiny "musical tree" formed a centerpiece on the table and repeated the ancient hymn "Silent Night." Mr. Hurja, dressed in a red velveteen suit, trimmed with imitation ermine, acted as Santa, greeting each guest with big, jovial smile.

Among those present were Senora de Vallarino, wife of the Ambassador from Panama, and Senorita Hilda Vallarino; the Commercial Counselor from the same embassy and Senora de Heurtematte, the Hawaiian delegate and Mrs. Joseph Farrington, Representative and Mrs. Lowell Stockman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mr. and Mrs. George Abell, Col. and Mrs. Alf Heiberg, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schenck, Gen. and Mrs. Clayton Adams, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mr. and Mrs. Blake Clark, Mrs. Alex B. Legare and her son Walcott Waggaman.

Also there were Gen. and Mrs. Richard Cutts of The Plains, Va., the latter celebrating her birthday; Mrs. Marye Thomas of Nevada, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Miss Dolly Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. James Mitchell and daughter, Miss Anne Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mrs. Ann Kramer Post, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Villard and the latter's sister, Miss Alexandria Gringutes, and many more.

Parties Before and After Hasty Pudding Show

SEVERAL informal parties took place both before and after the Harvard Hasty Pudding Show, "Here's the Pitch" at Lisner Auditorium last night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Barr Comstock of Washington and Boston had as dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Ralph W. Page, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher M. Granger, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Kingman, Mr. and Mrs. DeForest Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Lynde and Miss Dorothy D. Comstock.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Bacon were hosts at an open house from 4 to 6 p. m., in honor of their son, Edward A. Bacon, jr., who is a member of the cast. Following the performance, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gay Hooker entertained in honor of their daughter, Miss Katherine Hooker.

Dudley Nicolson Makes Debut; Misses Fahrney Bow at Tea

DEBUT parties in Washington yesterday took the form of old-fashioned teas at home. Three young Capital girls made their bows to society at such affairs. They were Miss Dudley Nicolson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn D. Nicolson; and the Misses Dawn and Carol Fahrney, daughters of Capt. Delmer S. Fahrney, USN, and Mrs. Fahrney.

The Nicolsons' party to introduce their daughter was an informal and gay gathering. Older friends of the family were asked to come between 4 and 6 p. m. and after that the young people took over until the party ended at 8.

For the occasion the debutante chose a frock of pale blue mousseline de soie, with off-the-shoulder neckline, basque bodice and full skirt. Her bouquet was an old-fashioned cluster of violets and pink rosebuds. She received with her mother, the latter wearing a dinner dress of American beauty crepe with a single green orchid at the shoulder.

Assistants at the party were a group of Miss Nicolson's fellow debutantes. Included were Miss Alice Diggs, Miss Mary Rapley, Miss Frances Sternhagen, Miss Ann Kilpatrick, Miss Sherrard Marthinson and Miss Ann Lee Riddick. Also assisting was Miss Nicolson's house guest, Miss Margaret McGee of Spartanburg, S. C.

Members of the family here for the party were the debutante's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Griswold of New York.

Breakfast Party

Earlier in the day Miss Nicolson shared honors with Miss Sherrard Marthinson at a large breakfast party given at Chevy Chase Club by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Detlow Mainch Marthinson. The Marthinsons plan to present their daughter at a formal event later in the season and yesterday's party was for young people only.

Guests included the Misses Agnes Dun, Beatrice Blair, Frances Dear, Patricia Emery, Jane Walsh, Patricia Morgan, Anna Marie Zoller, Bland and Catherine Glover, Ann Lee Riddick, Elizabeth Henry, Ann Kilpatrick, Mary Jane Colton, Nancy Slocum, Helen and Amy Willard, Mary Pearl Alexander, Carol Bradley, Monica Gaillard, Beatrice MacArthur, Phyllis Evans, Frances Haynes, Laura Winslow, Alice Diggs, Marguerite McGee, Jan Marthinson, Rebecca White, Judith Snowden, Patricia March Frances Carter, Margaret Wiley and Ruth and Robin Stickle.

Also present were William Emery, Peter Gaillard, Frank Harman, Ralph Lee 3d., Mark Wenley, Hayward Chappell, Harry Ong, James McHugh, Eustace Florence, David Semmes, Dion and Arthur Birney, William Rollow, Hayward Siddons, Dana Belser, Staunton Henry, jr., Stewart Beck, Cornelius Bull, Francis C. deWolf, Legrande Winfield Perce 3d, Hans and Casper de-Langa, Halbert and Johanathan Sloat, Deborne Piggot, Midshipman Robert Wanderlich, John Manfuso.

Festive Setting

Christmas holly and evergreens made the Fahrney home a festive setting for the late afternoon fete in honor of their daughter. The girls, both tall and slender, wore twin gowns of white silk brocade, designed with fitted bodices and swirling, ballerina skirts. They carried small, old fashioned bouquets of white roses.

Mrs. Fahrney, receiving with her daughters, was costumed in a dress of silver lame and her corsage was of two brown orchids.

Guests included both friends of Captain and Mrs. Fahrney and members of the young debutante set. Among out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Waterer of Westchester, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. William Warren Phodes, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Twaddell, Mr. Horace Twaddell, Mrs. Meredith Colket, jr., and Mrs. Thomas Washington of Westtown, Pa.

Both Dawn and Carol are among the most talented of this season's crop of debs. The former has been a violinist with the Washington Charol Society orchestra. She is studying music this winter and formerly was a student at the Philadelphia Conservatory. She was graduated in June from Chevy Chase Junior College, where she majored in commercial art.

Carol is the artist in the family and is now attending Corcoran School of Art. She and her sister received their early schooling at Westtown Friends School and Stanford Preparatory School.

Young Diplomats of 52 Nations Broadcast Holiday Greetings

By Peggy Preston

JOYEUX NOEL—muy feliz Ano Nuevo—and, of course, Merry Christmas!

These were but a few of the phrases that went out over the airways yesterday when the voices and images of children from 52 nations sent their holiday greetings from coast-to-coast, via radio and television, and overseas by short wave.

It was the annual Children's Broadcast, sponsored by the Greater National Capital committee of the Washington Board of Trade and the National Broadcasting Co. through station WRC. Participating were youngsters of Washington's diplomatic corps, dressed in the picturesque garb of their native lands.

The radio broadcast originated in 1936, but this is the first year that it has been seen by television. It was a colorful, lively stage against a magnificent room of the Statler Hotel. The little guests sat in rows on a stage against a magnificent backdrop of red poinsettias and evergreens. In front of them, in red and blue uniforms, were the men of the United States Marine Band Symphony Orchestra, playing the traditional music of Yuletide and setting little hands to clapping with such tunes as "Jingle Bells," etc.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the Children's Broadcast committee, opened the program and then Announcer John Batchelder took over, introducing the children in turn. First to step up was little Sally Hannegan, daughter of the former Postmaster General and Mrs. Hannegan. Sally, dressed in a blue velvet dress with lace collar, spoke her message in the name of the children of the United States.

HAND-IN-HAND TO THE CHILDREN'S BROADCAST, when little folk from 52 nations said "Merry Christmas" via radio and television at left, Virginia Gouras, daughter of the Counselor of the Greek Embassy and Mme. Economou-Gouras, is led to the stage by Jochem Helb, son of the Counselor of The Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Helb. Both wore costumes of their native lands

From Australia came Julian Forsyth and from Austria there was George Goertz, in Austrian native dress of gray green jacket and Tyrolean hat. Belgium sent George Van Den Berghe and Helena Lima represented Brazil, clad in a "Bahiana" costume, sprinkled with silver and gold coins.

Then there were Ellen Stone of Canada; Elizabeth Rodriguez of Chile; Bobby Chih-Mai of China; Fernando Garcia of Colombia; Alejandra, granddaughter of the Costa Rican Ambassador, Francisco de P. Gutierrez; Marilys Belt, daughter of the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Belt. Katka Houdek was present from Czechoslovakia and Marianne Seidenfaden of Denmark, pink and pretty in a Danish cap and short, jacket suit.

In addition were Ivan Cohn of the Dominican Republic; Norma Cueva of Ecuador; Wedad Zaky of Egypt; Alexander, grandson of the Ambassador of El Salvador, Hector David Castro; Meri Lehtinen of Finland; Isabelle Wapler of France; Jeremy Edwards of Great Britain; Virginia Gouras of Greece; Lyuba Mendez-Zebadua of Guatemala; Thor Thors of Iceland; Anuradha Kaul of India; Mehri Bakhtyar of Iran; Waleed Chorbachi of Iraq; Ethna Brennan of Ireland; Danda Ortona of Italy and Clavenda Bright of Liberia.

Steps in Preparing Frozen Turkey

To prepare a frozen turkey quarter for roasting, loosen wrappings and thaw completely until meat is no longer stiff nor joints rigid. This takes overnight or longer, depending on refrigerator temperature. Remove pin feathers. Singe if necessary. Rinse quarter thoroughly, and wipe dry. Rub salt inside the cavity.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Brief Honeymoon, Widower Hurries Back To Stock Farm With Second Bride, Fires Two Hired Hands and Lets the Chores Fall on Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Less than a year ago I married a widower who has four children, three daughters and a son. The boy is 16 and the girls are 8, 12 and 20 years of age. I have three sons by a former marriage and my boys are 9, 11 and 15 years old.

We live on a well-stocked farm, keep chickens, a large herd of milk cows, raise nearly every ounce we eat and sell cream, eggs, etc. My husband works with a construction crew, making $500 a month, and at the time we married he had two farmhands, as the farm chores were too much for him—even with help from his son.

As soon as we settled down from our two weeks' honeymoon, he discharged the hired hands and the milking of 22 cows was thrown on my eldest son and me, along with all other chores—feeding and watering stock, gathering eggs, gardening, etc.

We get up at 3:30 a. m. and don't get to bed until 9 or 10 p. m., but the others sleep late and none of the girls will set the table, wash a dish or make a bed; and if I speak of this my husband always says, "Well, dear, you wouldn't want them to go to school with rough, red hands, would you?"

Drives His Wife, Pampers Children

HE ALWAYS says it costs a lot to keep another man's family. What does he mean? He knew I had children when he married me, and he promised to take care of us. Besides, when I cook, wash, iron, mend, etc., and clean up after all his children daily, it seems I'm doing a lot for another woman's, too.

While we were on our honeymoon his eldest daughter redecorated the house, disposing of furniture I treasured, giving pictures away, etc., but her dad felt that was okay. That was Carol! He gives her $120 a month for college expenses and sends her other gifts constantly; but he doesn't give me a cent for personal expenses.

I do numerous laundries for neighbors to earn pennies for such items as toothpaste, face cream, etc., and if I need more money I have to write to my parents or a brother for it. I hate greediness and argument and I don't like divorce, so what am I to do? Both my husband and I read your column and I am hoping your answer will put us right, so please answer soon. C. E.

Man Was Looking For Slave Labor

DEAR C. E.: In hastening back from the honeymoon to fire his two hired hands and let fall on you and your eldest son the staggering load of work described, your husband gives evidence that he didn't marry you for sentimental reasons, but as a convenience, with intent to exploit your physical strength and willing spirit.

Also it appears that in ushering you into the traces, for the purchase price of a marriage license, he likewise had slave-driver designs on your three boys, calculating in terms of bargain labor eventually to be wrung from them in return for board and keep.

In general his policies and preachments in this marriage reflect a shocking caste-difference of feeling for himself and his progeny as versus you and yours. And yet one wonders if his first wife fared much better.

Possibly her premature death was hastened by chronic exhaustion and misery of mind inflicted by his selfishness, and maybe his coddling of Carol and the younger girls is incited by furtive remorse and guilty wish to atone for ruinous usage of their mother.

Wife Is Keeping Pace That Kills

IN ANY EVENT, considering his income and economic status, his niggardly treatment of you is downright disgraceful, as are his mean references to the cost of supporting you and your sons. And this would be true even if he weren't using you as slave labor to care for his house and children and save himself the price of two farmhands.

You are keeping a pace that kills; and the crux question is: why do you do it? Apparently because he expects it; and because—so you say—you shrink from greediness, argument and divorce. But isn't that another way of confessing cowardice?

What to do? Strike for justice. Read the riot act. Insist on reasonable hours of rest, hired help in the field, equitable sharing of housework by his daughters, a personal allowance of at least $5 a week,—and the general respect and consideration that are your due as his wife and caretaker of his brood. And lastly, don't be afraid of divorce: which is passport to dignity as compared to the rotten deal he is now giving you. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Bring Clothes in When Dry

Bring in the clean clothes off the line as soon as they have dried. Unless you are trying to whiten them there is no value in having them remain there to collect dust, grease from the oil burner, or run the chance of being dampened again in a shower.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

I am planning on having a few of my women friends in around Christmas time and thought that perhaps a tea would be the best way to do it. I thought I would ask my closest friend to pour the tea and coffee, but I was wondering about the best way to serve the rest of the refreshments. I plan to have sandwiches and cookies as well as nuts and mints. Would it be better to have these placed on the dining room table and let the guests serve themselves after getting their tea or would it be better to pass them around to them? Also, I was wondering whether small paper napkins would be permissible since I have only a few small linen napkins. I would appreciate your answers to these questions as well as any suggestions you might have for making this little affair more pleasant. R. C. P.

A tea would be a lovely way to entertain your friends at Christmas time. By all means ask your friend to pour the tea at the table. I would suggest, if you plan to have both coffee and tea, that you ask two friends to pour, one at each end of the table. Arrange the sandwiches and cookies on the prettiest trays or large plates you have. If you have a long guest list, it would be wise to have at least two plates for sandwiches so that one can be in the kitchen being refilled while you are serving from the other in the dining room. The same is true of the cookie plate. Have the plates on the table and let guests serve themselves after getting their tea. Later, pass the plates around a time or two (or have a friend do it for you). It is quite permissible to use small paper napkins. Choose them in a color to carry out your color scheme. Make your tea table just as pretty as you can, with a Christmasy centerpiece—a miniature Christmas tree complete with trimmings and with tiny packages under it would be attractive. Be sure to use candlelight in the dining room. It's so flattering to your guests and gives a lovely sheen to silver and china. At one of the loveliest Christmas teas I ever attended, the whole house was lit by candles. To get back to the serving, things will move more smoothly if you arrange in advance to have someone in the kitchen to keep tea and coffee forthcoming and plates replenished.

I have a set of fairly expensive wooden "glasses" — made in Cuba—apparently of mahogany wood. At time of purchase they were represented as being finished or treated so that beverages (alcoholic and otherwise) might be safely served in them. After using them two or three times, they now give anything served in them a strong flavor of the wood. Do you know of a product that would keep the wood flavor from penetrating into the beverage and yet would be safe to use? J. C. D.

There is on the market a varnish which is resistant to liquors. It is also used on the tops of bars and is sometimes referred to as bartop varnish. If you refinish your glasses with this, I believe the odor of the wood would be eliminated. Sand varnish down well after thoroughly dry.

I have a stitched pearl evening bag lined with ivory-colored satin. The lining, however, is marred by lipstick stains. These have been there for some time. Is there any possible way to remove them? Also, how can one remove lipstick from the faille lining of a handbag? M. McF.

Work vaseline into the stains to loose them and then sponge with carbon tetrachloride. If a trace of color remains, sponge with denatured alcohol. On acetate rayons, dilute the alcohol to one part alcohol to two parts water. Pull the lining away from the covering before starting treatment to prevent forcing the stain through to the outside of the bag. Use same treatment to remove lipstick from the faille lining.

Some years ago it was possible to buy china narcissus flowers, very lovely and natural looking. Since I have not seen such artificial flowers for a long time, I wonder if you could tell me if they are still made and where they might be purchased. M. O.

The gift shops in department stores sell artificial flowers which are dipped with porcelain, called porcelana. These are arranged in pots of assorted flowers. The store I contacted had tulips and roses mixed with small flowers. Perhaps by visiting such departments you can find narcissus, too.

I am getting a mahogany kneehole desk for Christmas and would like to cover the top in some way to protect the finish. I wondered if it would be possible for me to buy leather and cover it? If so, how would I attach it to the desk? M. B. K.

A cover which will offer the most protection to your desk top is plate glass. Look under "glass" in the yellow pages of the directory for a firm which will cut the glass to the exact size. If you don't wish to use glass, you could cover it with artificial leather. To keep it on, make a half inch wide hem all around the piece. Insert elastic into this hem—one piece of elastic runing around the desk. Place cover on desk and tighten elastic to hold cover taut. Be sure to cut the piece of leather large enough to allow for the hem and enough to extend over the edges all around to hold the cover on.

CALM MOMENT—There aren't many times in "Tycoon" when Lafaine Day and John Wayne manage moments of such bliss. Usually they're involved with father (Cedric Hardwicke) and South American engineering problems. The RKO film opens at Keith's Wednesday

One on the Aisle—

Hungry for Vitamins

Du Maurier Film Lacks Vitality

By Richard L. Coe

THE HIPPODROME'S "Hungry Hill" is an unexciting film about the usually exciting Irish.

Though a good deal of care has gone into this J. Arthur Rank importation, the result is tedious. Margaret Lockwood, usually cast as a vindictive female, settles into the role of an aging mother and the supporting cast is good but, again, unexciting.

The story is one of those family chronicles dear to the machines of fiction writers. A business-like gentleman who's been living in Ireland for only 200 years is resented by the natives when he determines to turn a stark hillside into a copper mine. During a riot when the natives try to break up the mechanism, the owner's promising elder son is killed.

This leaves John to take up the responsibility of his inheritance, but son John is listless about the whole thing. He does, however, marry the spirited Margaret, who produces four children before his untimely death.

Which brings us "Hungry Hill" to the next generation, where troubles continue. The Donovans, who once owned "Hungry Hill" still don't like the upstart Brodericks; one brother falls in love with another brother's fiancee and Margaret gets older and grayer.

The trouble with the film (as with any cold recitation of the plot) is that in adapting her novel to the screen with Terence Young, Daphne du Maurier has remembered her book all too well and forgotten the vast difference between telling a story with words and with pictures. The illustrations, while handsome, are not enough for an engrossing screen play.

Quell Lockwood Brogue

Another rather amusing problem has been muffed in the film. This finds some characters speaking what passes for an Irish brogue to these ears and others clipping along in BBC English. At one point Miss Lockwood does remember to nibble at an Irish accent ("Sure, the divil always looks after his own..), but most of the time her tones are those of "Bedelia" or "The Wicked Lady."

Unfortunately, the Hippodrome doesn't appear to be equipped with a complete cast sheet, so one can't be sure about this, but one comparatively minor character (the girl who marries the wrong brother) gives a hint of the quality which has captivated the London stage. We suspect, from her velvety voice, that she's Eileen Herle, who has been acclaimed for her acting in the role Tallulah Bankhead played here as "Eagle Rampant." Miss Herle now is acting the Queen to Olivier's film "Hamlet" and hers is a voice of distinction.

Apart from that voice, "Hungry Hill" is nothing much.

HOLIDAY SCHEDULES continue to shift about. Sidney Lust's Maryland theaters—the Hyattsville, Cheverly, Kaywood, Bethesda, Milo, Marlboro and Cameo—will be closed Christmas Eve so employes may be home with their families. This is an annual custom and a thoughtful one. On Christmas Day, the Warner, Metropolitan and Central won't open their doors till 2:30 p. m., a device that gives front-of-the-house folk Christmas dinner with their families. Warner neighborhood houses on the 25th will be opening at 2:45. On the 26th, nine Warner neighborhood houses which don't usually present Friday matinees, will be open in the afternoon.

DISABLED VETS from Walter Reed and Bethesda Naval Hospital will be guests of the Little Theater this morning at "Miracle on 34th Street' 'and "Jennie."

THE NATIONAL'S matinees this week and next, too, are off schedule. Instead of the usual Wednesday matinees, "I Remember Mama" will be playing on Friday afternoons, December 26 and January 2. The Saturday matinees stand pat.

DOROTHY CROISSANT, who must have designed thousands of costumes for all those Roadside and Washington Civic Theater plays, is back at the trade from which illness kept her too long. She did the costumes for "Lamp at Midnight," which opened last night in New York. This is Barrie Stavis' version of the Galileo story produced by New Stages (the other is Experimental Theater's, reviewed in this column two weeks ago). The energetic Dorothy, daughter of the late GW professor, DeWitt Clinton Croissant, made a quick trip to the Edinburgh Festival last summer and was tempted into her New Stages assignment by co-director Norman Rose, another Civic and Roadside standby.

TONIGHT: Charlotte Greenwood arrives in an unaccustomed role—for her, at least. The beloved "Letty" of the long legs opens a two-week run at the National tonight in that nostalgic nonmusical, "I Remember Mama," but her notices from the Coast are better than impressive.

352 Va. Herds Top 300 Lbs. Of Butterfat

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—Virginia Dairy Herd Improvement Associations had 352 herds that produced 300 pounds or more of butterfat per cow and four herds that topped the 500-pound mark during the year ended November 30, Assistant Dairyman William H. Armstrong of the Agricultural Extension Service reported.

Of the approximately 530 herds that completed a test year in the State's 47 DHIAs, 63 averaged 401 to 500 pounds of butterfat per cow, 118 averaged 351 to 400 pounds, and 167 averaged 301 to 350 pounds, Armstrong said.

He listed the J. B. and Paul Roller herd of 14 registered Jerseys at Timberville as the top DHIA producer, with an average of 528.8 pounds of butterfat and 9734 pounds of milk.

Ranked second was the Marvin Perkins herd of 31 registered Holsteins at Herndon, with an average of 518.4 pounds of butterfat and 13,144 pounds of milk.

The two other herds that bettered 500 pounds of butterfat per cow were the Charles R. Hope & Son herd at Purcellville, with 511.4 pounds of butterfat and 11,274 pounds of milk, and the Otto Kelley herd at Purcellville, with 503.3 pounds of butterfat and 11,741 pounds of milk.

Armstrong said 80 Virginia counties are now covered by DHIA's, with 14 new groups, including 220 herds, organized during the last year. He said 830 herds are registered in State DHIA's.

Loudoun was listed as the top county, with 119 herds, comprising 5548 cows, registered in five separate improvement associations. Fairfax stood second with 63 herds and 2838 cows in its three associations.

Rep. Hoffman Plans to Break Chicago Gang

By The Associated Press

Representative Clare Hoffman, 71-year-old Michigan Republican, announced two new moves yesterday in his campaign to break up the so-called Chicago "syndicate" which he described as the successor to Al Capone's gangland regime of the roaring twenties.

Hoffman said his first move, in the next session of Congress, will be to call Attorney General Clark before the House Committee on Executive Expenditures "to find out why we can't see FBI reports on the granting of paroles" to four former Capone mobsters.

Hoffman, chairman of the committee, said the FBI has withheld the information on the ground it would have to be cleared through the Department of Justice.

Waiting Five Weeks

"We're still waiting for it to clear," he said. "We've been waiting for five weeks."

As his second step Hoffman said he would introduce a resolution to give his committee authority to examine the Treasury's income tax files, "and then we'll have these Chicago hoodlums on the spot."

Hoffman recalled his November 28 House speech in which he said that "four notorious Capone gangsters," convicted in a million-dollar shakedown of the movie industry, had been paroled under unusual circumstances after serving little more than 3 years of a 10-year sentence.

On the House floor, Hoffman named the four as Paul Ricca, Louis Campagna, Philip D'Andrea and Charles Gioe, and termed them "the inheritors of the Capone power in Chicago."

In his speech Hoffman asserted that Paul Dillon, St. Louis attorney, who managed President Truman's first senatorial campaign campaign in 1934, had "mysteriously interested himself in these paroles."

Dillon Denies Charge

The Michigan Congressman said Dillon, appearing as a witness before the Expenditures Committee in Chicago last September, denied he had been retained as an attorney for the four convicts.

"Dillon testified he called on the Parole Board in Washington on August 6, 1947, one week before the four paroles were signed," Hoffman said. "He testified that his friendly intervention had been solicited by an old friend, one Edward Brady, a member of the Missouri Legislature. He testified he visited frequently at the White House, but denied he ever discussed any parole matters with President Truman."

Cholera Kills Seven in Syria; Borders Closed

Damascus, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Cholera, the scourge that killed thousands of persons in Egypt this fall, has invaded Syria and killed seven persons in Hauran and in communities on the outskirts of this capital, the government announced today.

All Syrian physicians have been mobilized. The affected areas have been roped off and their people inoculated in the start of a nation-wide campaign of vaccinations.

Lebanon and Iraq, to the southeast, have suspended all air traffic with Syria. Lebanon has closed its land border as well, while Iraq has established border quarantine for travelers from Syria, Lebanon, Palestine and Trans-Jordan.

50 Stockings For Santa at Sterling Home

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 21 (Spl.). — Christmas preparations are going on as usual at the L. J. Sterling residence on Washington st. here. The tree is up, the food is in the larder, and the children have been on good behavior for days.

The fact that on Christmas Eve almost 50 stockings will be hung on the mantel, around the fireplace, and about the living room doesn't trouble anyone. That's usual. Fifteen of the stockings belong to the immediate family, and the rest to relatives.

The annual gathering of the Sterling clan at this season is supervised by Mrs. Ruth Camalier Sterling, head of the household. She started it all when her children were young, and has continued it.

Frank Sterling, her son, handles the decoration of the huge tree, second in size only to the Fire Department's municipal tree in the center of town. Under it will be placed some 50 separate piles of gifts, just to keep things from becoming too confused.

This is the second postwar Christmas of the Sterlings. During the war, when members of the family were scattered around the world, everyone spent months packing the stockings off to them. One cousin off in the China-Burma-India theater didn't receive his until July of 1944.

Rev. Smyth to Blacksburg

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—The Rev. Ellison A. Smyth 4th, pastor of Hartsville, N. C., Presbyterian Church, has accepted a call to become pastor of Blacksburg Presbyterian Church, P. Miles, pulpit committee chairman, announced today. Mr. Smyth is expected here about February 1.

Turkeys Burn In $500,000 W. Va. Blaze

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 21 (AP). Forty thousand pounds of Christmas turkeys went up in smoke today in one of two fires that caused an estimated loss of $850,000 in two West Virginia cities.

The turkeys were in the Charleston plant of Armour & Co., where loss was estimated at $500,000.

A business block in Williamson, 90 miles to the southwest, was burned in the other fire, which also resulted in injuries to three men. Loss was figured at $350,000.

The Charleston fire broke out shortly before midnight in a two-story brick warehouse. Seven fire companies finally got the blaze under control at 1:30 a. m., but only the shell of the warehouse remained.

Firemen said the blaze was hard to fight because of the inflammable nature of the building's contents—including a carload of lard.

The Williamson fire destroyed two department stores, the old four-story Williamson Hotel, two restaurants, a chain grocery, three apartments, a rooming house and a watch repair shop. The hotel was padlocked several months ago after vice raids and was unoccupied.

Third Army Probes Treatment of Prisoners

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Col. F. C. Griswold, inspector general of the Third Army, began an investigation today into alleged rough treatment of prisoners at the Camp Gordon disciplinary barracks here. It was learned that Col. Hugh D. Adair, barracks commander, was being relieved of his post.

Colonel Adair requested a transfer to an overseas assignment several months ago. His successor, Col. B. B. Albert of the Green Haven, N. Y., disciplinary barracks, will take over here in January.

Daily Mirror
REVIEW AS IT APPEARED IN DAILY MIRROR, AUG. 27
By FRANK QUINN
Broadway missed the boat in letting the charming, sweet and simple romantic story, "I Know Where I'm Going," get away. It is at the Sutton, 3rd Ave. at 57th St.
The title lacks box-office subtlety, but, like the British who made it, it is a straightforward label for a romantic tale of a headstrong girl who has her niche picked out for herself.
She is betrothed to an elderly, rich, industrialist, who arranges her arrival on a Scottish isle with split-second precision. Stranded, near her destination, she meets a naval officer during a storm, and wonders why and if she's going. For the first time, she lets herself be detoured.
Roger Livesy, seen as "Col Blimp" and in "Stairway to Heaven," plays a restrained character in a complete about face. Wendy Miller is the girl, with beauty and charm. Supporting players are Pamela Brown, Finlay Currie, Capt. Duncan MacKechnie, Walter Hudd and Margot Fitzsimmons.
The film is arty, with beautiful scenic shots of the storm-swept Hebrides. There are timing episodes. We suggest a trip off the beaten path to catch "I Know Where I'm Going," with its simplicity and freshness.

U. S. to Seek Scrap Iron In Germany

By The Associated Press

An eight-man mission will go to Germany this month to hunt iron and steel scrap that can be brought back to relieve a bottleneck in steel production in the United States.

Secretary of Commerce Harriman announced yesterday the industry-government mission, to sail from New York December 30, will:

1. Determine the quantity and location of scrap in the possession of the United States occupation forces, and the feasibility of bringing the critically short material to this country.

2. Report on the possibility of obtaining rubble and other scrap from Germany for use in American steel mills.

To Consider European Needs

Harriman described this an another step to "assist and encourage industry in locating potential sources of scrap at a time when maximum steel production is urgently needed in behalf of our domestic economy."

Also, the undertaking is designed to fit in with foreign aid programs, Harriman said, giving assurance that "needs for scrap in European iron and steel production will, of course, be taken into account in any plans."

The mission's fact-finding operations, to center at Frankfurt after the members first confer in Berlin with Gen. Lucius Clay, Army chief in Germany, will not include surveys of the scrap situation in other parts of Europe, Harriman said.

Members of Mission

Chairman of the mission is John L. Haynes, Commerce Department. Other Government members are Lieut. Col. S. M. Pool, jr., Army, and Isiah Frank, State Department.

Industry members of the mission are:

Joseph B. Andrews, Cincinnati, and C. B. Minnes, Buffalo, N. Y. of the American Iron and Steel Indistitute; Richard V. Bonomo, Jersey City, N. J. and H. L. Chase, Canton, Ohio, of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, and George D. Branston, Spring Lake, Mich., Gray Iron Founders Society.

Helicopter Crash Kills 2 in Oregon

Portland, Oreg., Dec. 21 (AP).—A helicopter owned by the Oregon Journal crashed and burned late today west of the city, killing Sam Jackson, grandson of the founder of the newspaper, and Ambrose Cronin, jr., prominent Portland wholesaler.

P. L. Jacwson, publisher of the Journal, said the two men apparently had taken the helicopter into the air on a pleasure flight and presumably were circling near the Cronin residence when the plane fell to earth on a fairway of the nearby West Hills Golf Club.

Ex-Premier Qavam Arrested, Tehran Press Reports Say

Tehran, Iran, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Press reports said today that former Premier Ahmed Qavam es Sultaneh was arrested yesterday and his passport confiscated as he was about to depart by plane for the United States.

The reports said a mob armed with sticks gathered at the airport shouting "death to Qavam" and that troops were called to disperse them.

Qavam paid a farewell visit yesterday to the Shah, Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, the reports said, and was scheduled to depart by plane for the United States by way of Switzerland, when his arrest was ordered by the public prosecutor.

A Majlis (parliament) speaker announced today that a parliamentary committee would investigate the charges against Qavam. The nature of the charges was not disclosed.

The Iranian cabinet resigned December 4 in a dispute with Qavam, then Premier, over domestic policies. Qavam refused to resign until he was voted out by the Majlis. On December 10 the Majlis voted no confidence in Qavam and he was ousted.

Last week, mobs seized possession of newspapers, clubs and buildings run by Qavam's Democratic Party and troops with machine guns were called to restore order.

Italian Food Workers' Strike Settled

Rome, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Labor Minister Amintore Fanfani announced today that the national strike of food workers had ended on terms satisfactory to both sides, assuring Italians of bread for Christmas.

Three hundred thousand workers in the food industry agreed to go back to work after their negotiators and industry representatives reached accord on payment of dismissal indemnities, recognition of seniority rights and extra holiday pay.

The workers, members of the Communist-led General Labor Confederation, left their jobs in basic food producing and processing plants at 10 a. m. yesterday. Only enough food handlers remained on the job to assure a temporary supply of bread, milk and fresh meat, but they could be pulled out on a moment's notice.

Union officials said the strike was called because of employers' refusal to provide for severance pay in the seasonal food industry. The government charged the walkout was called by Communists seeking to heckle the new coalition government of Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

Nenni, leader of the left-wing Socialists, declared in an editorial in his party's newspaper, "Avanti," that Italy's Communist-dominated workers' groups already have assumed the "aspects of self-government" in their demands on government and management.

"In case of the continuation of the present government or an analogous one, these organs are destined to assume the function of self-government to substitute for the lack of initiative from the top," Nenni wrote.

He cited three recent meetings to support his assertion that the Italian workers are becoming independent of the government:

1. The meeting last month in Milan of 6000 factory workers' delegates who demanded a part for labor in the direction of industry, and called for a virtual end of free enterprise.

2. The meeting of 3000 peasant leaders and delegates in Naples last week to demand the "democratization" of semifeudal southern Italy, and to urge federal appropriations to industrialize the area.

3. The meeting of 5000 peasant delegates, scheduled tomorrow in Bologna, to draw up a program of drastic land reforms and demands for labor participation in the direction of agriculture.

French Assembly Continues Austerity Program Study

Paris, Dec. 21 (AP).—The National Assembly debated a proposed 1948 tax schedule, part of the Government's "austerity program," tonight after rebuffing a Communist effort to end the discussion.

The austerity measures, already approved by the finance committee, are intended to stop inflation. The tax schedule, calling for new income and property levies, is designed to balance the budget next year in line with the Marshall Plan. Rene Mayer, minister of economics, has estimated it would bring in an additional 150 billion francs (about $1,250,000,000).

The tax program received powerful support in the debate from Pierre Mendes-France, financial expert of the Radical Socialist Party. Mendes-France has great influence in financial matters on the Assembly's right wing.

Some observers believed passage of the tax plan by Christmas was foreshadowed by defeat of the Communist attempted to stop its discussion.

The Communist motion was voted down, 311 to 183, last night. However, the test revealed that Premier Robert Schuman's assembly majority had lost some of its strength, as followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle abstained from balloting.

Rene Capitant, spokesman for De Gaulle's Rally of the French People, said Schuman's cabinet had neither the confidence of the assembly nor of the country. He introduced a motion calling for a general election, but a parliamentary technicality prevented this motion from being put to an immediate vote.

The rally, a new political organization, won the recent French municipal elections but has not had a chance to demonstrate its strength in a national election.

Phone Strike Foreseen by Union Head

The Communications Workers of America announced that negotiators from its 33 divisions would meet in Washington during the week of January 19 to work out a bargaining program for 1948.

CWA President Joseph A. Beirne stated that the program would definitely include a demand for higher wages, and that this "might mean a clash of some kind in 1948." He added:

"We hope the lesson the companies should have learned last April—when there were some 370,000 phone workers on the picket lines—will help avert a head-on collision next spring, when the present contracts expire."

CWA, which says that it represents 233,000 workers, contends that wages in the phone industry have fallen far behind the general wage pattern.

Beirne's statement emphasized the union's position that the companies could easily absorb wage increases without raising rates because "the Bell System obtained 81 million dollars in additional revenue in the past year, and is asking for at least that much more."

Tuesday at 8 p. m. the Central Northwest Civic Association will have its tenth annual Christmas pageant at Garnet-Patterson Junior High School, 10th and U st. nw. On the program will be the Tenth Street Baptist Church choir and a group of kindergarten children from Garrison School.

Old Christmas Spirit to Reign At Williamsburg

Williamsburg, Va., Dec. 21 (Spl.).—The traditional Yule log ceremony, a festive "open house" at Raleigh Tavern and the opening by candlelight of the reconstructed Governor's Palace and historic Capitol building here will be included in the Christmas activities arranged by Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., as part of the community celebration.

The famous Raleigh Tavern will be the scene of the annual open house on Christmas at 4 p. m. The mansion of the colonial governors will be open by candlelight from 7 to 10 p. m. Friday, and the regular Saturday evening candlelight tour of the Capitol on Saturday will be offered to the public without charge.

Hollins College Gets Gift From Mrs. du Pont

Hollins College, Va., Dec. 21 (Spl.).—A second gift to Hollins College endowment fund from Mrs. Alfred I. du Pont of Wilmington, Del., for the purpose of augmenting faculty salaries, was announced today by Dr. Bessie C. Randolph, president.

Dr. Randolph called the gift, which was in securities valued at $54,550, of "tremendous help in meeting the acute need" for additional endowment funds for the college.

Mrs. du Pont is a member of the Hollins College board of trustees and serves on the buildings and grounds committee.

Her first gift to Hollins was made in September, 1946, when she estabablished the Lalla Gresham Ball Memorial Fund in honor of her mother, with an initial gift of securities valued at more than $36,000.

D. C. Firm Awarded Contract For Hyattsville Storm Sewers

Storm sewers will be built at Queens Chapel rd. and Hamilton st. West Hyattsville, under a contract awarded by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The drains will help alleviate the storm water situation in the general area, particularly in the section adjacent to the new shopping center and the large apartment development under construction.

The contract went to the low bidder, J. L. McIlvaine Co. of Washington, for $14,519. The Maryland State Roads Commission has agreed to share part of the cost.

The storm sewer will not relieve the flood situation entirely, but will help carry off water that ordinarily would back up, and keep water in the residential district from seeking natural drains.

Wheatoncrest Contract

Leo Butler Co. of Silver Spring was successful bidder at $16,327, for water and sewer construction in Wheatoncrest, near Glenmont. The same firm also will handle a $37,450 project for water and sewers in Alta Vista, north of Bethesda, and another for Jones Bridge rd. to Coquelin Parkway, Coquelin ter., near Chevy Chase, on a bid of $20,806.

The Nickles Bros Co. of Hyattsville submitted the low bid of $5959 for construction of water mains and sewers in Fleischman's Village, near Suitland, and a $10,813 water and sewer job in Chillum Terrace, as well as one for $1052 at Markham st. and Stirling rd., Chalfonte subdivision, near Four Corners.

An extensive water main and sewer construction job will be handled in Sunset Terrace and Rosewood, near Silver Spring, by the Intercounty Construction Co. of Hyattsville on a low bid of $56,446. The company also was low bidder for a $72,165 project in Forest Estates.

Henry J. Bowie Co. of Washington was low bidder on another water and sewer contract involving $3588 in Green Meadows near Hyattsville.

New Construction Plans

The Sanitary Commission also authorized preparation of construction plans for several other projects, which will serve proposed veterans homes and apartments in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. Bids will be sought at a later date. They include:

Columbia Highlands; Lyndale, Wyngate and Nowell drs., Linder lane and Melvern rd., Wyngate; Aniston rd., Beech ave. Virginia U. Puts On Display Copy Of Rare Chart

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 21 (Spl.).—The British may have snubbed the Old Dominion when they excluded her from the list of "eastern seaboard States" and included Michigan instead among the recipients of charts from the rare Atlantic Neptune, but the University of Virginia has one anyway.

The rare book and manuscript curator of the university's Alderman Library, John Cook Willie, today placed on exhibition the York-Gloucester map from the Atlantic Neptune chart book, a duplicate of the one presented to the William L. C. Clement Library of American History at the University of Michigan.

Thirty-four of the ancient copper engravings, dating back to 1770, went to various libraries and societies in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana and Michigan.

The University of Virginia copy now on exhibition was presented in 1903 by the late Bernard Shipp of Louisville, and was part of a valuable collection of voyages and travels.

Specialists to Head Va. Poultry Programs

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—Virginia Agricultural Extension Service specialists will head the programs at a series of county and district poultrymen's meetings to be held in the State's main poultry areas in January and February.

Prof. Harry L. Moore, head of the Virginia Tech poultry department, said the session would be sponsored jointly by the Extension Service and the county poultry advisory committees. Meetings have been arranged for Harrisonburg, Winchester, Alexandria, Gloucester and the Northern Neck counties, but dates have not been set.

Salvation Army Plans Expansion

Plans for a $350,000 expansion program of Salvation Army activities in Washington have been decided upon by the Army's Advisory Board.

Expansion would include replacing the inadequate 6th st. premises, which the Army recently sold, and expansion of the Army's Negro activities, youth camp at Chopawamsic recreational area in Triangle, Va., and the youth program in the northeast section of the city.

A building site to replace the 6th st. Salvation Army headquarters is being studied by the advisory board. Army officials said yesterday that a reserve fund of $500,000 from sale of the 6th st. property will be applied to purchase of the new site.

The advisory board has approved launching of the building campaign early in May next year. Chairman Frank Birgfield of the advisory board has pointed out that the social welfare, group work and spiritual activities of the Army have expanded greatly in the last decade.

This expansion, he said, necessitates additions to existing properties, as well as a larger facility to house the emergency home where women and children are given temporary care.

The Salvation Army welfare department has reported that it is receiving "excellent cooperation" from both public and private agencies in its Christmas program, both at the kettle collecting booths and toy projects.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Philosopher in Blue Has "Fare" Sense of Humor

Just to prove that it doesn't pay to be grim about life's little problems, W. P. Campbell of Rockville, Md., recalls a wonderful story.

Capital Transit's motormen are supposed to look out for the company's interests as diligently as possible, but sometimes the assignment taxes the patience of even the most placid of operators.

The one who is the hero of District Liner Campbell's story was busy taking fares from passengers boarding the front of the car. But through his mirror he noted sadly that several deadheads had sneaked in through the back door.

Before the harried motorman could take action, the damage was done. So, after checking in the last of his paying passengers, he calmly rose, faced the rear of the car, and called out:

"Do any of you people who sneaked in the back door need transfers?"

ADD BUNDLESOME WOMEN

The controversy over bundlesome women in streetcars refuses to die. Let's give the ladies the last word (as usual):

"I think you should keep in mind," writes Paula Ferguson of 1325 Fort Stevens dr. nw., "that according to recent surveys, half of Washington's married women are employed.

"Presumably a vast majority of the single girls are also employed. And this means that thousands of women have no choice in the matter of carrying bundles.

"Male griping doesn't make the bundles any lighter for the women who have to carry them."

PET STORY

Originally, the H. C. Osborn family at 912 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park, Md., had a dog, a cat and a bird.

But about a month ago, 12-year-old Carl Osborn found two egg-sized cocoons in his back yard. He took them indoors, and put them in a vase.

The other night, the Osborn home suddenly became host to hundreds of baby praying mantis. The warm air had hatched them prematurely, and there they were, swinging from the curtains and playing leapfrog on the furniture.

Carl and his dad rounded up as many of the insects as they could catch, and put them in a jar. The Agriculture Department advised that the mantis would make nice pets if the Osborns would feed them some hamburger.

So the Osborns now have a dog, a cat, a bird, and a jar full of praying mantis.

DILEMMA

His doctor tells him that he needs more rest—"perhaps 18 hours a day."

Glegge tried to follow the doctor's orders, but found that this left him only six hours in which to do a day's work, eat, shave, travel back and forth, etc.

This meant he had to move much faster than usual, and when he returned home he was more tired than when he started—necessitating 10 hours of rest.

At that point, only 5 hours were left for eating, working, and all the other daily chores—so he had to move faster than ever, and ended the day more tired than ever.

"Why," he asks in conclusion, "must we stick to the old-fashioned 24-hour day?"

GOSH!

Ever since I started writing this column, I began compiling a list of percentages on my phone calls.

I can tell you what percentage of the people call to tell me about kittens they want to give away (they're invited to put their items in writing), what percentage want publicity for a church bazaar, what percentage are looking for free passes to something or other (we don't get any) and what percentage want to give me a piece of their mind for something I've done.

But I got a call yesterday that stopped me cold. It didn't fit in any previous category.

It came from George Sammond of 3321 Blaine st. nw., and here's what he said:

"I just wanted to tell you that I enjoyed your column this morning."

MALE HELP WANTED

Assistant to important executive. $9975 per annum job will be open soon. Send references, photo, and record of all recent grain transactions to Kenneth C. Royall, Pentagon.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK, Dec 21—George A. Sloan, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Opera, and Board Member Philip Reed invited Gov. Alfred Landon to be their guest at the Met. When the opera ended, they took Landon and Alfred Frankenstein, the music critic, to the Met. Opera Club, where a table had been reserved by Sloan . . . They were stopped at the door because Landon and Frankenstein were "not dressed," and, unlike Sloan and Reed, were not wearing tails . . . Board Chairman Sloan and Board Member Reed started to protest. "Oh, let's go. It's quite all right." Governor Landon assured his embarrassed hosts. "This is not the first time I've been turned down."

Richard Tauber is ailing seriously in London. He's anxious to get to Switzerland, but can't leave because his money is invested in a sterling area . . . Bob Hannegan, who submitted to a rare operation to reduce his high blood pressure, won't permit the doctors to examine his blood pressure again. "I feel fine," he says. "I've been adhering to the diet; I've been operated on; nothing more can be done. An examination would mean only a statistic."

When W. C. Durant was head of General Motors he decided to send his friends bridge cards as Christmas presents. He told his advertising man, J. H. Newmark, to get the cards and to have the Durant crest printed on them. The playing-card manufacturers insisted that the time was too short to make special designs. One finally suggested: "Tell Mr. Durant that if he really is anxious to get the cards, we'll do it and have them ready on time. But only on condition that he order at least the minimum quantity required by us" . . . Mr. Durant really was anxious to get them, and gave the minimum order, which was for $15,000.

Tommy Manville was in the Stork Club the other night, tipping the orchestra to play "Here Comes the Bride," and announcing his impending trip to Mexico. He left at 2:30 a. m., with a police-car escort blowing its siren in the drive up deserted, rainswept Fifth ave.

Sam Breadon, who sold the Cardinals to Bob Hannegan, no longer owns a single share of stock in the St. Louis ball club. But he and the new owner have a handshake agreement whereby Breadon will devote one hour a day to the team's welfare . . . The big league scouts are observing the progress of Chief Justice Vinson's son, who batted over .420 at college last season. He can have his pick of the clubs.

The story is being told of a young man who made a trip to New York and was lionized by all the dowagers with marriageable daughters. When he came home he was asked: "Did you become engaged while you were in New York?" He answered: "No, I didn't become engaged, but I was misunderstood twice."

French Welcome Friend Ships

By Drew Pearson

Paris.—There was a flurry on the Communist side of the French Chamber of Deputies last week. Communist leaders put their heads together, whispered hurriedly. Another deputy, Maurice Schumann of the French Popular Republican Party, had just introduced a resolution thanking the people of the United States for the Friendship Train, and the Communists didn't quite know how to vote.

Pearson

If they voted against the Friendship Train it wouldn't go down well with the French people, for the French people had shown great enthusiasm for the train. But if they voted for the Friendship Train it meant that they approved this gesture of American friendship; and hitherto the Communist Party has voted against every proposal of American aid to France; in fact, has even called strikes partly to prevent American foodships from being unloaded.

So the resolution of Deputy Schumann expressing the thanks of the French National Assembly for the American gesture which has become so popular in France put the Communists squarely on the spot.

After a hurried consultation, however, they decided not to oppose the Friendship Train. The resolution of thanks passed unanimously—much to the amazement of the French people, who hitherto had seen a constant succession of Communist "noes" against American aid to France. The Communists didn't abstain but voted for the Friendship resolution.

French Welcome Magnificent

The dockworkers union, one of the toughest in France, and hitherto striking against the Marshall Plan, let it be known they would gladly unload food from the people of America. The railroads backed cars alongside the ship even while Ambassador Caffrey spoke during the welcoming ceremonies.

Unfortunately, the boxcar shortage is so severe that it will take some time to get the food all over France, but the first token train is moving down the center of France today.

At the suggestion of the French Ministry of Health, 90 per cent of the food will go to children. Incidentally, the French Ministry of Health and all other French government officials have knocked themselves inside out to cooperate. The French railroads are hauling the food free. A French stevedoring company is unloading the ship free at a cost to them of 1,500,000 francs. A French tugboat company berthed the ship free. And the French Relief Agency, ENTRAIDE, put up three million francs to handle various overhead expenses. In fact, all French agencies have been working night and day to make this gesture of friendship just as successful over here as it was in the United States of America.

French Press Spreads Itself

French newspapers are pitifully thin these days. Hitherto, they have generally ignored arrivals of American grain.

With the Friendship Train, however, they really spread themselves. Most papers have carried front-page headlines daily. The only exception has been the two Communist papers, but even one of them, Ce Soir, finally had to break the frigid role of silence regarding the "Friend Ship." It actually carried a few paragraphs acknowledging the fact that this gift from the American people had arrived.

L'Aube—"The Friend Ship reaffirms the link between France and America."

France Libre—"After so many days of war, so much destruction, so much death, to see there at the docks this boat painted in colors red, white and blue, bearing gifts offered by one people to another people who have suffered and who suffer yet is a very great comfort indeed."

Le Monde—"This spontaneous gesture of thousands of United States citizens on a stretch of 3000 miles over which the Friendship Train passed, will deeply touch the French people."

TWO STORES OF NATIONALLY FAMOUS CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Warren R. Clardy . . . born in the Brushy Creek Section of Anderson County . . . was a scholarship student at Clemson College . . . and has been in Washington for approximately 40 years. A member of the District Bar for the past 30 years, he is an attorney at the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

SOUTH CAROLINA . . . the palmetto state

South Carolina, deep in the heart of Dixie, is a State with a romantic and glamorous past. But while we treasure our rich heritage . . . we are steadily working for a continuing prosperity ahead through industrial and agricultural advance. South Carolina played an historic role in our country's struggle for independence. The first independent government in the United States was set up in Charleston in 1774. Charles Pinckney, delegate to the Continental Congress, proposed 30 of the provisions of the United States Constitution; and was author of the historic slogan: "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute." South Carolina is traditionally an agricultural State. The first rice field was planted about 1680 from a bag of rice given to Dr. Henry Woodward by a sea captain . . . not to plant, but to eat! If Dr. Woodward had eaten the rice, the development of South Carolina's great agriculture wealth during Colonial days might have been delayed for years. Soon after the invention of the cotton gin, cotton became the staple crop . . . and remains so to this day. Vegetation abounds in our fertile soil and varied crops can be produced throughout the year . . . from the Blue Ridge Mountains, across the Piedmont Upland, to the Coastal Plain. Today, a new spirit pervades South Carolina . . . a bustling spirit of business and industrial expansion. At present, factory earnings double the cash value of our farm products. Our hopes are exemplified in our present accomplishments . . . which we are sure are only the forerunners of future attainments by the people of South Carolina . . . in industry . . . in agriculture . . . and in culture. It is a privilege and an honor to add South Carolina's name to the roster of States which have been saluted by The Hecht Company . . . in testimonial to the greatness and traditions of today's America.

Warren R. Clardy

President South Carolina State Society

● SOUTH CAROLINA WAS EXPLORED by the Spanish in 1521 . . . when two caravels docked at Winyah Bay, at the mouth of Cape Fear River. The Spanish built Fort San Felipe on Parris Island in 1566 and remained there for about 20 years. (Parris Island is now a permanent Marine Corps base and recruiting center.) The first permanent English settlement was established in 1670 on land granted to eight English noblemen by Charles II. For the first 50 years of her colonization, wealthy landowners were called "Landgraves" and "Caciques," the only American titled class that ever existed. Charleston is the site of historic old Fort Sumter . . . Confederate base during the War Between the States.

● RICE CULTIVATION IN SOUTH CAROLINA . . . during Colonial days contributed greatly to the growth and prosperity of the province. Later, rice and indigo (used to make blue dyes) were supplanted by cotton as the major agricultural crop. Today, the State is fifth in the country in cotton and tobacco . . . third in peaches . . . and grows corn, hay, oats, sweet potatoes and peanuts.

● THE CITIES OF SOUTH CAROLINA . . . are famed for their magnificent colonial-style homes . . . and gardens of surpassing beauty. Lovely Magnolia Gardens and Middleton Place Gardens, the oldest formal gardens in the United States, have their counterparts in the smaller gardens surrounding many of the stately mansions and plantation houses. Yellow Jessamine (the State flower), the Cherokee Rose, wisteria, azaleas, waxy magnolias and camellias, mimosa, spikenard and crape myrtle bloom in lush profusion. The old brick garden walls are covered with ivy, legustrum and pittisporum. An air of mystic beauty is added to the South Carolina landscape by the Spanish moss shrouding the stately live oaks and pines and the palmettos, from which the State takes her nickname.

● SOUTH CAROLINA'S PRINCIPAL INDUSTRY is cotton textile manufacturing . . . with Greenville, Columbia and Spartanburg centers of the industry. Charleston makes asbestos, wood, pulp and steel products. South Carolina is a leader in lumber production . . . and turpentine and resin are major products.

● SOUTH CAROLINA'S SANTEE CANAL was completed in 1800 . . . and became the major 19th Century transportation artery from the rich inland plantations to Charleston Harbor. Today it is the backbone of the Santee-Cooper Hydro-Electric and Navigation System . . . which sparks so many of the State's growing industries.

● CHARLESTON COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA was the first municipal college in the country. The State is also proud of Clemson College . . . The Citadel, well-known military school . . . The University of South Carolina . . . and Winthrop College, the State College for Women, among many other outstanding educational institutions.

● SOUTH CAROLINA WAS THE BIRTHPLACE of President Andrew Jackson . . . and home of John C. Calhoun, Vice President under Jackson, and silver-tongued debater . . . General Francis Marion, the "Swamp Fox" of the Revolution . . . and author William Gilmore Simms. Washington landmarks, famous the world over, are the works of South Carolina architects . . . James Hoban designed the White House in 1792 . . . and Robert Mills blueprinted the Treasury Building and the Washington Monument in the 19th Century.
